Early Adjournment Idea Ditched in White House Parley.

Housing Measure To Follow Wages

Barkley, Bankhead and Rayburn Summoned; Map Strategy.

By William V. Nessly.

The Administration will press forward with its legislative program and is not even approximately proposing a date for adjournment of Congress, it was made clear last night after President Roosevelt had conferred for more than two hours with leaders of House and Senate.

Apparently little thought is being given in Administration circles to the suggestion of a recess until October or final adjournment soon with a special session called in the fall.

The tangled situation on Capitol Hill led the President to summon into conference Senator Alben Barkley, Democratic leader of the Senate; Speaker Bankhead and Representative Sam Rayburn, floor leader in the House. The four went over all phases of the picture in both houses, considered the possibility of passing each of the "desirable" measures pending, and mapping a program to bring about enactment of all possible.

Program Mapped.

On the Senate side, it was announced by Senator Barkley after the discussion, it is intended to finish with the wages and hours legislation, possibly today, then take up the Wagner housing bill. Hoping that the latter can be disposed of Friday or Saturday, the tentative plan then is to take up the measure for reorganization of the lower courts.

However, the picture is complicated by group demands for other legislation, while court reform opponents have been insisting on considering the court bill immediately after the wages and hours bill is out of the way in the Senate. On the theory the court bill itself is the key to adjournment, some leaders fear taking it up immediately after the labor measure might start an adjournment stampede hard to subdue.

"Do you think you can adourn in two weeks?" Senator Barkley was asked.

"I'd hate to guess we would adourn in that time," he replied.

"We hope to complete what we undertake."

A new drive for enactment of sugar legislation developed in the course of the day in both houses and resulted in announcement last night that the President will confer today with a committee from House and Senate on the question. State, Interior and Agriculture departments are opposing the legislation, but sugar Senators were urged yesterday by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, to join in a move to tie up Administration measures until a new sugar-control bill is enacted.

Reorganization in Line.

In addition, Barkley announced, the Senate Committee on Reorganization probably will open hearings next week on the President's plan for reorganization of the executive branch of the Government. The committee, scheduled to meet today, has no chairman since the death of Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, and it has not been decided whether Barkley, the new leader, will take the chairmanship. Barkley indicated the committee at its meeting today will decide on its course with regard to the hearings.

The House, dividing the President's proposals into four parts, a course opposed in the Senate, has already passed one bill to give the President six assistants, and is preparing to act next on the proposal affecting the General Accounting Office.

In the House, in addition to the three main bills listed for Senate action, an effort will be made, Rayburn said, to put through the crop-insurance bill, which already has passed the Senate.

Tydings Bill Argued.

The Tydings' price-fixing bill, which has been tacked onto the District of Columbia tax measure, will be taken up at a conference of the

Senator Holt's Sister Engaged to Attorney

Hessler-Henderson.

JANE HOLT.

Announcement of Betrothal of Legislator's Official Hostess to Ralph K. Chase Will Be Made at Party Saturday.

The engagement of Miss Jane Holt, sister of Senator Rush Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, to Ralph K. Chase, attorney with the Maritime Commission, and until recently associated with the Securities and Exchange Commission, will be announced Saturday, it was learned yesterday.

One of the youngest of Congressional hostesses, Miss Holt took over her duties on behalf of her brother two years ago, soon after her graduation from the University of West Virginia. A pretty blonde, she has become very popular among members of the younger social set in the Capital.

Formal announcement of the engagement is expected to be made at a party to be given at Miss Holt's home in Weston, W. Va.

35-Hour Week Placed in House Wage Measure

70-Cent Hourly Pay Also Inserted By Labor Committee.

Wages as high as 70 cents an hour and a work week as short as 35 hours yesterday were voted into the Administration's wages and hours bill by the House Labor Committee, while the Senate battled through a storm of amendments to a greatly modified measure.

The drastic House changes were ordered by a close committee vote, when Chairman Mary T. Norton broke a tie with her ballot. Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, ranking majority committee member, said the liberal revision might mean the defeat of the bill.

Meantime in the Senate, the Black wages and hours measure, providing wages no higher than 40 cents an hour and a minimum work week of 40 hours, encountered a new barrage of modifying amendments and its first resolute opposition speech.

Fears for All Industry.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, warned that "the American system of industry may be at stake" and charged the Senate measure dele-

Jackson Denies Tax Evasion by Mrs. Roosevelt

Charity Broadcasts Set 'Fine Example,' Joint Inquiry Told.

By Sidney Olson.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt "was prompted by the highest motive and has set a very fine example" by her action in broadcasting for charity, Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson said yesterday in denying that the President's wife had avoided taxes.

Jackson, apearing before the Joint Congressional Tax Investigating Committee, was answering sharply the continued questioning of Representative Allen T. Treadway, Republican, Massachusetts.

He uttered this defense after Treadway had posed this question: "Does not Mrs. Roosevelt's radio contract come under the classification of a 'clever little scheme,' to use the President's own words?"

Asked Advice First.

Jackson, serious faced, was about to continue a vigorous defense of Mrs. Roosevelt when Treadway broke in:

"I agree heartily that she has done many fine things, but would she have received $3,000 per broadcast for ten broadcasts if she were not the wife of the President?"

Jackson answered: "That is true. But the entire case shows that she

Court Plan's Friends, Foes Favor Survey

By Robert C. Albright.

A comprehensive committee study of all phases of judicial reform and court reorganization, including constitutional amendments designed for that purpose, yesterday was proposed by leading friends and opponents of the President's abandoned court plan.

A Senate resolution setting up a special committee of five to make the survey and report to the Senate Judiciary Committee, was introduced jointly by Senators Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, and Carl A. Hatch, of New Mexico.

Burke led the fight on the President's Supreme Court enlargement program, while Hatch was the author of the substitute plan adopted by President Roosevelt and the late Senator Robinson. They joined hands yesterday over ruins of the dead bill for a recess, fact-finding study.

House Weighs Like Plan.

Their proposal reputedly has the backing of Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and a majority of its members. If the resolution is adopted, the special committee appointed by the Vice President may include Ashurst, Burke, Hatch, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and one Senate Republican.

It was learned last night the House Judiciary Committee is considering similar action. A resolution may be offered in the House today or tomorrow providing for a parallel study by a special House group. House and Senate committees would work in harmony, but have separate identities.

The Senate resolution for a comprehensive court survey followed close on the heels of the judiciary committee's report to the Senate Tuesday of a modified lower court reform program for enactment this session.

The modified court reform bill carried out an informal agreement between Administration leaders and court plan opponents, meanwhile headed into unexpected Senate fight to lighten its provisions.

Minton Still for Curb.

By mutual understanding, when the original court plan was recommitted last week, the Supreme Court was to be left untouched in the new measure. In the face of this Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, said he will attempt to curb the court's powers by an amendment to the modified measure.

Minton would require a two-thirds majority of the Supreme Court, before any act of Congress could be invalidated. The Indianan said if any "agreement" had been reached, he was not party to it, and intended to press his amendment.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana Democratic liberal, immediately declared the Minton proposal a violation of the court bill understanding between himself, Vice President Garner, and Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley.

"I do not believe that such an amendment would be within the terms of the agreement," said Wheeler. "The proposal is of doubtful value. If enacted, it might be that a minority of the Supreme Court would uphold the Constitutionality of a law that—at some future date—would override the bill of rights."

Senator O'Mahoney originally advanced the Minton plan in the form of a Constitutional amendment. More recently O'Mahoney said the Supreme Court has the power, and in his opinion was likely to apply the two-thirds rule of its own volition.

The Burke-Hatch resolution yesterday for a recess court survey was believed to have buttressed arguments for the new lower court reform bill, by broadening the present purely "procedural" approach to the problem, and providing a factual avenue for additional legislation next year.

Reform Speed Object.

The court reform measure reported by Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, leaves for future determination the question of new judges in the lower courts, but asks

Chinese Open Surprise Drive On Japanese Base at Tientsin; Peiping Bombed, Envoy Hears

Bomber Is Shot Down; Revolt Reported in East Hopei.

The Chinese Embassy here declared last night that 11 Japanese war planes bombed Peiping and its suburbs but that the damage was "uncertain."

The embassy, quoting a communique from Nanking, seat of the Chinese Nationalist government, announced further that one Japanese bomber was shot down at Hsi-yuan and seven were seized when Chinese troops occupied Chaochiateng airfield, southward of Peiping.

In another dispatch from Nanking dated 1 a. m., July 29, the Nationalist government claimed that the garrison forces at Tungchow revolted against the head of the Japanese puppet state of East Hopei Province.

Missing Seaman Found.

"The Chinese troops entered the city and the Japanese are retreating toward Shih-ho," the dispatch stated.

Commenting on the shooting of an American marine by stray bullets in Peiping's Morrison street, the embassy declared:

"The Japanese reports saying that Chinese troops deliberately and provocatively attacked Americans are fabricated and groundless."

The Nanking government further announced that Sadao Miyazaki, missing Japanese seaman, had been found alive by Chinese authorities "in circumstances strongly reminiscent of the Kuramoto case of 1934."

"A ferryman picked him up yesterday (July 28) from the Yangtse River near Chinkiang, whence he was brought here (to Nanking) and delivered to Chinese authorities.

War Held Improbable.

"Fearing punishment because he patronized houses of ill-fame, Miyazaki left Shanghai aboard a British vessel, July 26. When the ship neared Kiangyin, opposite Chinkiang, he suddenly dsicovered he had no money to pay his passage so he jumped into the river," the dispatch charged.

The Embassy confirmed reports from the Far East that Chinese troops had captured Langfang and Fengtai, the latter town the base of Japanese military operations.

"Since the commencement of the general hostilities the Chinese troops are gaining the upper hand in all sectors," a spokesman for the Embassy declared.

Denying that war is imminent, the same spokesman said: "The Chinese government as well as the people have tried their utmost to remain peaceful. Of course, if Japan should refuse to take the olive branch and continue to insist on impossible demands the Chinese will not hesitate to defend their national existence."

Suma Promises Protection.

Declaring that, "Our people are making every effort to protect the lives and properties of foreign residents in the fighting area," Yeatichiro Suma, counselor of the Japanese embassy here, last night described recent activities of the Chinese army as "unforgivable."

Suma stated that the removal of the thirty-seventh and thirty-eighth divisions of the Chinese army from Peiping were absolute requisites for the safety of Japanese citizens as well as foreign residents living there.

Holding that the Japanese have been waiting for a period of two weeks for the Chinese to abide by an agreement they signed on July 11 to the effect that the thirty-seventh and thirty-eighth divisions would be replaced by the 132nd division in Peiping, Suma declared his people had no alternative than to insist on China's proper execution of the agreement.

D.C. Income Tax To Be Dropped By Conferees

By James D. Secrest.

Adoption of a modified business privilege tax and substitution of $1.75 realty tax rate for the $1 land levy were considered yesterday by Senate and House conferees on the District tax bill.

Another meeting is scheduled for 10:30 this morning, and indications are that an agreement may be reached at that time.

While no decisions were made, the consensus appeared to be that the Senate income tax will be dropped due to the insistence of House managers that it would be futile to submit it to the House again.

Senators Ready to Yield.

Senate conferees intimated they may yield rather than endanger the whole tax bill due to the possibility of an abrupt adjournment.

House managers also forecast reinsertion of the increase in insurance taxes from 1½ to 2 per cent. The Senate discarded this levy, which is expected to raise $200,000.

There was no controversy over the emergency loan authorization, the auto weight tax and the inheritance and estate levies as originally reported to the House.

Reduction of the gross receipts tax on all local businesses and professions from three-fifths of 1 per cent to two-fifths of 1 per cent appears likely if the conferees vote to substitute the business privilege tax for the income levy.

Primary exemptions of $2,000, instead of $1,000, and specific provisions to protect certain types of businesses which operate on a small margin of profit are likewise being considered.

Commissioners Ask Leeway.

Terrorist Blast Rocks Belfast On King's Visit

By the Associated Press.

Belfast, Northern Ireland, July 28. Police announced tonight that a deliberately planted mine caused today's violent explosion here during the royal parade marking King George and Queen Elizabeth's coronation visit to Ulster.

Police said they also had discovered a plot to wreck trains carrying police and other visitirs to Belfast on their return to the Londonderry area. A mine was discovered beneath the railway line at Temple Patrick in Antrim County.

The explosion within Belfast was one of a series of acts of violence during the day, attributed by police to extremist Irish Republicans, who oppose the British monarchy.

Feeling ran high in Belfast tonight, and police had purposely withheld announcement of the mine plant until after the King's departure aboard the royal yacht.

The explosion at midday was heard by the King and Queen as they were driven through the city's streets, but they gave no sign of perturbation and the parade was speeded along as scheduled.

The explosion was in a warehouse on Academy street at midday. The warehouse was little damaged, but every window in a four-story factory on the opposite side of the street was shattered. A hole was torn in two shop fronts 50 yards away.

Apparently carefully organized terrorism along the border between Northern Ireland and the Irish Free State and the blast here roused fears of a possible attack on the monarch, King for less than eight months.

But the 37-year-old sovereign and his smiling Queen showed no sign of perturbation as they rode miles through Belfast streets to the thunderous acclaim of more than 1,000,000 subjects and fulfilled their program of engagements.

Offensive Is Launched Against Japanese Stronghold.

Defense Division Abandons Peiping

Peril of Battle in City Lessens as Part of Troops Leave.

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin (Thursday), July 29.—Chinese troops began a surprise offensive today against Tientsin, Japan's North China garrison headquarters.

The Japanese were using all available air strength in an attempt to recover strategically vital positions lost during the night. Pursuit planes machine-gunned Chinese positions near the north barracks and bombers tried to blast Chinese troops out of positions near the railroad stations.

While the Japanese army was preparing a new offensive against Chinese garrisons in the environs of Peiping, the Chinese began a series of surprise raids before dawn.

Attack Rail Stations.

They directed their attack against the city's three railway stations, controlled by Japanese since last week, and against a Japanese air base just east of the city.

The hitherto pescefully inclined Chinese peace preservation corps, gendarmes, rose against the Japanese to intensify the conflict.

There was heavy fighting between these gendarmes and Japanese land forces near the east railroad station.

Two hundred Japanese troops were reported surrounded in a Sino-Japanese school. Gen. Li Wen-tien, Chinese gendarme commander, said that Japanese military pressure had become intolerable and that his forces were adopting defensive action.

One report said Chinese regulars had reoccupied the three railway stations—east, west and central. Another source said Chinese had occupied one station.

Barricades Thrown Up.

British, French and Italian troops threw up barricades to protect foreigners, including Americans.

Authorities of the British, French and Italian concessions declared a state of emergency. Stray bullets killed a French Annamite soldier and wounded a Chinese constable in the British police force early this morning.

The international bridge, connecting foreign areas with the east railway station, was closed to armed troops of all nationalities. French and Italian soldiers manned machine guns from behind barricades erected at both bridge approaches, to enforce the closing order.

Americans Protected.

The American Fifteenth Infantry barracks is situated in the Chinese area, but a majority of Americans are residing in the British and French concessions.

They were protected there by a battalion of Lancashire fusiliers and French colonial troops.

Meanwhile, Japan's naval force began shelling the North China Port of Tangku.

Army forces joined with an unnamed number of warships in the offensive at the port, on the Hai River, which serves Tientsin about 20 miles west.

Troops Quit Peiping.

Reports from Peiping revealed the thirty-seventh Chinese division had at last complied with Japan's demand to withdraw from Peiping, thereby lessening the danger of battle within the walled city itself.

The division, considered by the Japanese to be hostile to their economic interests in North China, was said to have withdrawn to Paotingfu.

Troops of the 132d Chinese division, however, remained at Peiping.

Japanese said that a remnant of Chinese troops from the Nanyuan barracks, south of Peiping, had attacked Japanese forces at Tungchow, capital of the East Hopei au-

Md. Farmer Kills 2 Women, Self in 'Revenge;' Life Savings 'Stolen' From Pillow, He Shouts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., July 28.—A mountain farmer today shot and killed two women, shouted that the theft of his life savings was avenged, and then committed suicide as a deputy sheriff approached him in a remote mountain section of Frederick County.

The man, Charles Martin, 58, of near Blue Mountain, inflicted fatal gunshot wounds on Mrs. Hannah Hahn, 38, and Mrs. Mary Albright, 30, of Catocin Furnace, returned to his hillside cabin and turned the gun on himself when Deputy Sheriff Charles W. Smith endeavored to arrest him. He was dead when the officer reached his side.

William Green, a neighbor, said Martin told him:

"I shot them because they got me drunk and stole every cent I had—$2,100—from beneath my pillow.

Green said Martin continued wild-eyed toward his house, brandishing his gun. A short time later he spied Sheriff Roy Hiltner and Smith closing in on the cabin, shrieked, and committed suicide.

Martin shot Mrs. Hahn in the mountains back of her home, 10 miles north of here, shortly after noon. She died instantly as a .38 revolver bullet entered her brain.

The man then returned to Catocin Furnace, found Mrs. Albright holding her small child in the home she shared with Mr. and Mrs. Hahn, and shot her through the head also. Mrs. Albright died an hour later in Frederick City Hospital. The child, although covered with blood from his mother's wound, was not injured.

William Hahn, husband of the woman first slain, works for the railway at Thurmont and was away from home at the time. Mrs. Albright come here from Gettysburg, Pa., less than a year ago.

In reconstructing the affair, Deputy Smith said that Martin had evidently approached Mrs. Hahn in a friendly fashion and taken her for a walk in the woods. Her body was found in a clump of weeds beside a path.

Sheriff Hiltner and other officers were searching tonight for traces of the money Martin is reported to have lost. No date for the inquest has been set, pending further investigation of the tragedy.

Martin has lived alone since his wife died two years ago. He is survived by two sons.

Scores Made Late For Their Suppers By Derailed Cars

Derailment of two northbound Brookland street cars tied up traffic at Truxtun Circle, North Capitol street and Florida avenue, for almost an hour last night, making scores of residents of the Northeast section of the city late for their suppers.

One of the cars rolled on the pavement at the entrance to Florida avenue, blocking westbound auto traffic for several blocks. The jam on the car tracks caused by the derailment of the second car held up 20 other trolleys.

According to officials of the Capital Transit Co., a section of the third rail dropped from its support, damaging the feeders of four cars shortly after 6 p. m. A fifth car attempted to push the others and the two leading cars ran off the track as they were rounding Truxtun Circle.

Mattern Wins Roper's Consent To Russian Flight Across Pole

Jimmy Mattern, husky Texan, who hopes to fly nonstop from San Diego, Calif., to Moscow, U. S. S. R., next month, will be granted a permit for the flight by the Bureau of Aeronautics, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper intimated yesterday.

He said, however, that three Government agencies, the Navy, Army and Weather Bureau, would investigate what value might result from the flight before any license was issued.

Disclosing that Mattern emphasized the scientific nature of the proposed exploit on his call yesterday, the Secretary said the Government lacked "knowledge of polar conditions."

Mattern declared yesterday that he was prepared to take off within a week after permission is granted. He said his plans called for refueling in the air over Fairbanks, Alaska.

Opposition to the flight within the Bureau of Aeronautics arose from the fact the Government is attempting to discourage exploits of a purely "stunt" nature. Mattern yesterday stressed the fact that he intended to follow a different route from that taken by the Russian fliers, exploring 1,000 miles of Arctic territory never before charted nor mapped. He pointed out that his plane, the Texan, has every instrument which could possibly aid him on the flight.

Secretary Roper admitted that the Government lacked authority to withhold permits when proposed flights met technical and other requirements.

His purpose, Mattern said Monday, would be to make surveys for the air route which eventually will come into existence over the top of the world. He also declared that there was much preliminary work yet to be done.

C. I. O. Backed Despite Vote, Nye Declares

Senator Says McGrady Insists on Negotiations With Union.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, told the Senate yesterday that he was reliably informed Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, insisted that the Apex Hosiery Mills, of Philadelphia, bargain with C. I. O. representatives, after the 2,500 employes gave the C. I. O. only 82 votes in an election in which 1,000 failed to vote.

"If a great Government is going to tolerate an administration by a board or bureau which tolerates practices of that kind," Nye said, "the hour is not far off when Americans are going to be reminded that 'it can happen here.'"

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, said he got the impression from listening to Nye that his "exclusive source" of information was the pastor of the Resurrection Lutheran Church, of Philadelphia with whom Nye said he had held a three-hour conference yesterday.

Conceals Source of Data.

When Nye said the pastor was "not the exclusive source" of his information, Schwellenbach asked him who else had verified the story. The North Dakotan asked to be excused from answering the query.

Nye said the Labor Board was asked five times for an election in the plant, but each time "denied or ignored" the requests, until finally the community decided to hold its own election.

Before the election, he said, employes were subjected to "unbelievable treatment" by C. I. O. organizers in the streets and warned not to participate in the election.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, promptly challenged Nye's arguments as "unfounded," and accused him of not even asking the Labor Board for its version of the dispute.

"You shouldn't criticize the board until you've tried to get the facts," he snapped.

Wagner Renews Dispute.

Nye then finished his speech with a declaration, "the first step in establishing dictatorial governments in Russia, Italy and Germany" was the suppression of "voluntary, independent unions."

Again challenged by Wagner, Nye conceded he had never heard of a single employer who contended the board's elections were not "absolutely fair and impartial."

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, then sprang from his chair to brand Nye's statements "the most specious ever offered in a Senate debate."

"Last week we were told that the first step toward fascism and communism was control of the courts by the Executive," he shouted.

"Now we hear that the next step is control of labor unions."

"I'm getting awfully tired of listening to these arguments that everything the Administration does to help the great masses of American people is a step toward fascism and communism."

He challenged Nye to name a single Russian union which was suppressed by the communists, and asserted:

"The truth is that there weren't any unions under the czarist regime, and the Soviets simply couldn't abolish something that didn't exist."

Wife Contradicts Strangler's Story Of Woman Killing

New York, July 28 (AP).—Despite a jobless auto salesman's explanation that he killed Mrs. Florence Jackson because their clandestine romance was "hopeless," prosecutors were informed tonight the victim planned to divorce her affluent broker husband.

Julius Garrell, Queens Lawyer, told District Attorney Charles Sullivan that only a few hours before the 39-year-old mother of two was strangled after a drinking bout, she had telephoned him for an appointment to discuss a divorce.

Simultaneously the estranged wife of the confessed philandering killer, Stanley A. Martin jr., tearfully recounted to Assistant District Attorney J. Irwin Shapiro that Martin had urged her to divorce him so he could marry Mrs. Jackson.

Martin told officers when he drove up to a Queens police car with Mrs. Jackson's body yesterday, he had strangled her at her own request as part of a suicide pact.

But today, Mrs. Martin told District Attorney Sullivan, that, in the course of frequent discussions with her of his clandestine romance, Martin had remarked, "I am going to kill her because she is making me jealous."

Gas-Electric Bus Is Tried Out Here

The first gas-electric bus to come to Washington was demonstrated by the Capital Transit Co. for the benefit of Public Utilities Commissioners yesterday.

One of four purchased on an experimental basis, the bus is powered by a gasoline motor which generates electricity. Current is transmitted to an electric motor which connects with the drive shaft.

Little different in appearance from present buses, the new type carries 41 passengers, cost $12,700 and weighs 2,000 pounds more than those now in use here. Its chief advantage, it is said, is in cheaper operation.

Scripps Estate Obtains $98,000 Cut in Old Tax

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Tax Appeals decided today Robert P. Scripps, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was $252,672 deficient in estate taxes as executor of the estate of Ellen B. Scripps, who died August 3, 1932.

The board made its finding after Scripps asked a redetermination of a $350,662 deficiency assessed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

The revised judiciary bill now reported back to the Senate represents a genuine effort at reform in Federal judicial procedure. It is a constructive piece of legislation that should not occasion any controversy in either House or Senate. It is particularly laudatory because it indicates the opponents to the original legislation were not moved by blind opposition, but have a sense of discrimination.

WALTMAN.

But this measure does not fulfill completely the "gentlemen's agreement" entered into by the Senate the day the Supreme Court reorganization bill was recommitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee. That agreement was reduced to writing by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney—the James Madison of the Judiciary Committee—and was read to the Senate. There can be no misunderstanding its terms.

The agreement specifically called for, in addition to the provisions in the bill just reported, "new judges on basis of need—not age." This referred to the need for additional judges in the Federal district courts, and it was widely understood this need, as far as possible, would be met at this session of Congress—not a year or two hence.

* * *

The Senate Judiciary Committee, however, now reports to the Senate that it lacks sufficient information as to conditions of dockets or the congestion of business to deal with this subject. It recommends that "request should be made that the Attorney General, in collaboration with the Judicial Conference shall, before the convening of the next session of the Congress, make a survey of conditions in the various districts and circuits, and shall report to Congress at its next session recommendations for the creation of such additional district and circuit judgeships as the Attorney General and the Judicial Conference may deem advisable or necessary.

Such procedure is, of course, the scientific way of dealing with the problem, if we were starting out de novo. But we are not. This question has received intensive study on Capitol Hill for the last 5½ months. It is presumed it has been studied for a much longer period by the Justice Department.

Thus, the committee's proposal smacks of buck-passing in order to avoid some of the unpleasant political complications which usually surround the creation of new judgeships. But the time has come to lay aside politics when dealing with the Federal judiciary. The time also has come to cease being niggardly with the Federal judiciary. It may surprise people to know that the Federal courts have been hamstrung in recent years as a result of economy measures and at a time when millions and billions of dollars were being shoveled out in other directions by the Federal Government.

The fact that additional Federal district judges are needed is beyond dispute. The President falsely used that undeniable situation as a justification for his original judiciary scheme. Indeed, the only doubt that exists is as to the number and the particular districts to which new judges should be assigned—and in respect to several districts even that is not controversial.

There are three sources of reliable information as to the need for additional judges. One is the Justice Department, which, in a survey made as of June 30, 1936, showed that the civil dockets in ten Federal judicial districts were more than one year behind and that the civil dockets in eleven other districts were from six months to one year behind.

Such information is now somewhat out of date, except for the fact that as a general rule the worst congestion was in the large, industrial centers of population and, generally speaking, is not expected to show much improvement. The Justice Department, however, has access to more recent information which would give a fairly general idea where additional judges are needed. Although a week has passed since the agreement to provide additional judges on a basis of need was made, the Attorney-General has not volunteered any information and the Senate Judiciary Committee has not asked him for it.

But even if the Attorney General is not anxious to volunteer co-operation in cleaning up the situation he so sharply criticized last February, Congress has other information at its disposal. Senator Frederick Steiwer, in March, formally asked the senior judge of each judicial district whether he needed additional help and to state the condition of his dockets.

All the replies were interesting and illuminating and many contained a mine of information about the condition of court dockets. In 53 districts, the existing judges indicated there was no need for an additional judge. In 14 districts the judges felt they needed the help of an additional jurist, either attached to their district or appointed to serve at-large in their States.

Of course, an incumbent judge may not be the most objective authority on the question whether he needs assistance. But many of the judges indicating such a need supported their contentions with very convincing statistics and statements of fact. Several made it clear that they kept their dockets reasonably up to date only by working long hours, six and seven days a week and without vacations. Several complained bitterly of being forced to render important opinions without time for necessary research work and deliberation—"shooting from the hip," as one phrased it.

Moreover, of the 21 districts listed by the Justice Department as being more than six months behind in their civil dockets as of June 30, 1936, nine were included on the Steiwer list of those needing help. They are the Middle Pennsylvania, the Northern Illinois, the Western Washington, the Northern Mississippi, the Eastern and Western Oklahoma, the Northern Georgia, the Southern California and the Massachusetts districts. The judges of the Eastern Michigan (Detroit) District, one of the most congested in the country, did not reply to the Steiwer inquiry.

* * *

But that is not the full extent of the information before the Senate at this time. The Judicial Conference, comprising the senior circuit judges meeting with Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, last October recommended appointment of an additional district judge each for the Northern Georgia, the Eastern Louisiana, the Southern Texas and the Western Washington districts. The recommendation of additional judges for the Northern Georgia and Southern Texas districts was first made by the Judicial Conference in 1930. It was repeated in 1931 and 1932. For reasons of governmental economy the Judicial Conference made no recommendations in 1933 and 1934. The recommendation regarding these two districts was repeated in 1935 and again last October. How many times does Congress wish the Judicial Conference to make a recommendation before it is acted on?

A little intelligent study of the Justice Department records, along with the results of the Steiwer survey and the last Judicial Conference report should enable the Senate Judiciary Committee within a brief period to determine at least eight or ten judicial districts where an additional judge is needed.

But, at least, Congress should not adjourn without creating four judgeships pursuant to the last recommendation of the Judicial Conference. That would be a step toward correcting the existing congestion. Another step would be for President Roosevelt to fill, before Congress adjourns, all existing Federal judicial vacancies, some of which have existed for many months and even for more than one year.

And speaking of the Senate "gentlemen's agreement," Senator Sherman Minton certainly has broken it with his proposed amendment requiring two-thirds majority opinions by the Supreme Court to declare Congressional acts unconstitutional. He not only acquiesced through silence that the "Supreme Court is out" as a part of the agreement, but he became a party to that understanding when he voted to recommit the Supreme Court bill to the Judiciary Committee. Some people just do not seem to know what a "gentlemen's agreement" means.

Homesteaders Call Strike in Spat With RA

By Russell Smith

Strikers and struck enacted a pretty comedy drama yesterday in a dispute between the Federal Government and workers at the Tygart Valley, W. Va., homestead project of the Resettlement Administration.

The homesteaders, 130 in number, prepared for "peaceful picketing" of their own homestead fields. The RA, through Acting Administrator Milo Perkins, encouraged them in their right to strike, "as free American citizens."

Perkins Adds Warning.

But Perkins, in a telegram to the board of directors of the project association, added the warning that "the money available to us for the completion of all Resettlement projects is only available for the completion of the work within this present fiscal year."

The strikers want the community center at Tygart Valley built "under a Government contract to provide work for the association members" R. Z. Wilson, one of the five directors, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying.

"If and when a final determination to build the community building is arrived at, we shall be glad to consult with you before advertising for any bids, should it be decided not to proceed by force account," replied Perkins, in his wire.

Four Grievances Listed.

Other than the community building's construction, the homesteaders complained $63.80 had been spent for labor, gasoline and a threshing machine to thresh 84 bushels of rye, a cost "entirely out of reason," according to L. G. Griffies, treasurer of the association. The directors summed up some of their grievances as follows:

(1)—"Inefficient management.

(2)—"Waste of Federal and Tygart Valley Association funds."

(4)—Disregard of "all principles of democracy in the management of the project."

"Certainly, they can strike," said Perkins last night. "We don't object to that. They have a perfect right to strike, as free American citizens, to obtain what they think is reasonable. But we are limited by direction of Congress in what we can do. On that score, we can't meet the requests."

Coberly Is Opposed.

Another plea of the homesteaders was for removal of L. Wade Coberly, resident RA engineer. Perkins said Coberly will be transferred to Elkins, W. Va., because construction at Tygart Valley is virtually completed and there is no longer need for a resident engineer. An RA project manager, however, will remain in charge, he added.

Of the 152 workers who live at the homestead, 130 will "join the 'walkout' from the project's fields amid the picturesque mountains of north-central West Virginia," an Associated Press dispatch said. Twenty will remain on the job and two are undecided.

The project was undertaken under a $400,000 Federal grant in 1933. The board of directors, elected by the homesteaders, has been changed three times since then.

Jury Asked to Use 'God-Given Sense'

Greenfield, Mass., July 28 (AP).—A jury of farmers and businessmen, counseled by Judge Thomas J. Hammond to use "God-given common sense," tonight deliberated the case of Thomas E. Elder, 55, former Mount Hermon school dean, charged with assaulting a one-time associate, S. Allen Norton.

Playing a big role in the case was a story of a "kissing episode" related by Norton, who declared he had seen through holes bored in an office partition, the former dean "kiss and embrace" his secretary, Miss Evelyn Dill, six years ago.

Norton said he told Dr. Henry J. Cutler, then headmaster, about the alleged incident. Dr. Cutler testified during the trial that he, Elder and Norton had "prayed" over the matter and Elder had forgiven Norton for his report.

On Capitol Hill

Congress Not Minding Own Business, Bailey Says in Third Report on Postoffice Inquiry.

FAILURE TO MIND its own business when it investigates such matters as the Memorial Day shootings at the Chicago plant of the Republic Steel Corporation, was attributed to Congress by Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, in a minority report of the Senate Postoffice Committee yesterday. It was the third report to be filed on inquiry into charges that strike pickets blocked mail addressed to persons in strike-bound plants.

Bailey said the police were "dealing with an armed mob" in the Chicago riot and that the police were "entitled to the benefit of the presumption they acted in good faith." Then he said:

"The power of Congress to sit in judgment upon acts of local police—or for that matter, of Governors and mayors—is slim indeed."

The North Carolinian said mail should have been delivered to the plants.

"The Army itself should have been called out in order that the mail might be carried," he said.

If the Postoffice Department believed it was unsafe to deliver mail into the plants, Bailey said, its "clear duty" was to call upon the Department of Justice to preserve the law and after that upon the President.

Bailey said he had "little patience" with the Postoffice Department's plea that the mail held up was "abnormal." He contended those who paid the postage had the right to demand delivery.

The Senator said those who interfered with the mail were C. I. O. representatives.

"If this organization is to invoke the law it ought to respect and obey the law," he said.

MAJORITY LEADER BARKLEY agreed yesterday to "give sympathetic consideration to pleas that the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill be brought to a vote in the Senate before Congress adjourns.

Proponents of the legislation agreed, in return, they would not try to attach it as a "rider" to other bills the Administration is attempting to dispose of before Congress goes home.

Barkley assured Senators Wagner (Democrat), of New York, and Copeland (Democrat), of New York, that he would be "glad to confer about a time for its consideration."

He said he did not want such a controversial measure to block "emergency legislation" such as the Administration's wage-hour and housing bills.

COMMANDER CHARLES E. ROSENDAHL, of the Lakehurst Naval Air Station, told the House Naval Committee that a lighter-than-air ship would have expedited the Amelia Earhart search in the Pacific.

He said such an airship could have reached the Howland Island search area from Honolulu in one and a half days or from the San Francisco base in four days.

Rosendahl urged construction of two large rigid airships in addition to the 3,000,000 cubic-foot training ship specified in the Sutphin bill being considered by the committee.

LIVESTOCK MEN'S representatives disagreed on whether the Agriculture Department or the Interstate Commerce Commission should control rates for loading and unloading at stockyards.

Glenn T. Stebbins, secretary of the United States Livestock Association, urged a Senate agriculture sub-committee to approve legislation giving the Agriculture Secretary the power.

Charles E. Blaine, representing the American National Livestock Association, the National Wool Growers Association and other organizations, opposed the measure. He joined with the Interstate Commerce Commission in proposing I. C. C. supervision.

Agriculture Secretary Wallace and Joseph B. Eastman, I. C. C. commissioner, agreed in letters to the committee that some legislation was needed to clean up a question of jurisdiction left open by the interstate commerce act and the 1921 packers and stock yard act, but disagreed on the method.

Constitution Copies Sent League, Irish

The League of Nations Library, at Geneva, Switzerland, and the National University of Ireland, at Dublin, will be the recipients of facsimiles of the United States Constitution and of the Declaration of Independence, together with portraits of the signers of the United States Constitution, Representative Sol Bloom, director general of the Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, announced yesterday.

Encased in bronze frames, the facsimiles were taken abroad by M. F. Doyle, chairman of the committee on international relations for the Philadelphia committee; Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania and a large delegation of Pennsylvanians, when they sailed yesterday for Europe. The facsimiles are a gift from the Quaker City. Formal presentation will be made by Doyle and Gov. Earle in both cities.

Painters Seek Bureau Ruling In Pay Dispute

Strikers Ask Clarification of Wage Act on U. S. Building Work.

Union painters, on strike at Government projects of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department, may resume picketing tomorrow, Bryce P. Holcombe, business agent of the union, announced yesterday.

The painters yesterday appealed to Admiral C. J. Peeples, director of the Procurement Division, to ask the Labor Department for an interpretation of the Davis-Bacon wage act, as applying to the dispute which has tied up work on the City Postoffice and the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Representing the painters, Harry S. Wender, attorney, urged Admiral Peeples to make a formal request for a ruling as to whether the eight-hour day is a violation of the Bacon-Davis act, as the union contends it is.

Wage Scale Met.

The hourly wage for union painters is $1.57 1-7 and it figures $11 a day for a seven-hour day, Wender said. Double time should be paid for the extra hour, Wender pointed out. This would be required of a union contractor, he contended.

A spokesman for the Procurement Division said yesterday that special inspectors had looked over the pay rolls and envelopes of the painters at the two jobs in question, for which contractors are the William Wilson Co., of Atlanta, and Coons & Raptis, of Brooklyn, and found that the wage scale of $1.57 1-7 an hour was being observed.

Meanwhile, accusations of personal prejudice and departmental stubbornness were hurled at Treasury Department officials by a member of Congress and Wender yesterday relative to the strike.

Truckers End Buffalo Strike, To Rush Food

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 28.—Striking truck drivers tonight unanimously ratified a compromise contract reached with wholesale grocery merchants and ended the most serious phase of Buffalo's eight-day food embargo.

They agreed to go back to work early tomorrow and rush new supplies to grocery store shelves empty of many staple foods.

Negotiators for the union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, and wholesalers who were forced to close down when the drivers walked out, agreed on terms of the truce late today.

The compromise provided a modified closed shop, 5 per cent pay increases for all employes who have not been advanced since last March 1, a $25.20 minimum for unskilled workers, a 48-hour week, time and a half pay for overtime work, and one-week vacations with pay.

Negotiations in a companion strike of 1,000 C. I. O. union butchers, which complicated the food situation by tying up fresh meat supplies, remained stalemated until Friday.

Violence in Cleveland.

Cleveland, July 28 (AP).—Cleveland threatened tonight to put its entire police force on double shifts to quell a wave of assaults and window-smashing near Republic Steel Corporation's Corrigan-McKinney plant and other strike scenes.

Cats, Dogs, Chicks Now Can Be Sent By Express Planes

Living animals with no offensive odor can now be sent by air express, provided they will not require food or water in transit, the air express division of the Railway Express Agency announced yesterday.

This change of policy, breaking a ten-year air express ruling, was due to increased speed and enlarged and temperature-regulated cargo compartments on planes, the announcement stated.

Under its provisions, cats and dogs and baby chicks can be shipped through the air—if their owners do not want to send them too far away, and if the shipments are satisfactory to the airlines. Crating as for regular express shipment will be required.

As a preliminary "testing" numerous shipments of baby chicks were made this spring through Washington, from Virginia to Costa Rica. When they will reach their destination within 72 hours from the time of hatching, such shipments will still be accepted. "Started chicks," however, are taboo.

Sneak Thieves Get Loot Worth $1,000

Cigarettes and sundries worth $322 were taken from a drug store in the Roosevelt Hotel, Hyman Dickman, 1825 New Hampshire avenue northwest, told police.

An adding machine valued at $455 was taken from his automobile parked in the rear of Fourteenth and I streets nothwest, Conrad A. Wickham, manager of the Monroe Adding Machine Co., reported to police.

Clothing worth $200 was stolen from his machine parked at North Capitol and E streets, Nick E. Rinaldi, 3614 Albemarle street northwest, told police.

Educator Cleared In Assault Case

Greenfield, Mass., July 28 (AP).—Thomas E. Elder, 55-year-old former dean of Mount Hermon School for Boys, was acquitted tonight of a charge of assault with intent to kill a former school associate, S. Allen Norton, who once accused Elder of kissing his pretty stenographer.

The Commonwealth had charged Elder accosted Norton, former school cashier, in Norton's Greenfield garage, May 25. Norton testified Elder had pointed a gun at him, but Elder denied he was in Greenfield that night.

Witnesses testified that Norton, six years ago, accused Elder of "kissing and embracing" his stenographer, Miss Evelyn Dill, but both Elder and Miss Dill denied the accusation.

U. S. Hunts Expert For Virginia Reel

The recreation association of the Interior Department is looking for experts in the leading of the Virginia reel.

Ian Forbes, chairman of the social committee, will take names of applicants for try-outs.

3,500,000 Park Visits Herald Better Times

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes said yesterday visits of nearly 3,500,000 persons to national parks since last October were "indicative of more prosperous times."

He reported a 22 per cent increase in visitors at national scenic spots, and said: "If preliminary reports of travel to the national parks are any gauge of travel during the next two and a half months, the 1937 travel for those areas will cause all previous records to topple."

Administration to Push Its Legislative Program

Harris & Ewing.

Roosevelt Maps Full Program Of Legislation at Conference

"interested parties" with the Attorney General, it was said.

The proposal for Congress to quit soon and return in October was touched on but briefly at the White House conference. Senators La Follette and Black have urged such procedure but it is known House leaders are opposed. Should a recess be taken, members would not be entitled to mileage to and from their homes. Should an adjournment be taken, with the President calling a special session in the autumn, mileage would be paid.

There appears to be little hope for tax legislation at this session. The joint committee, it is reported, will require another ten days to draft a bill, and hasty legislation is being opposed by some leaders on the ground that it might result in additional loopholes for evasion or avoidance of taxes, the very practices the proposed legislation is designed to stop.

Farm Legislation "Out."

Farm legislation definitely is out for the session. House committee abandonment of the proposed "ever normal granary" measure until next session was announced yesterday, 24 hours after the Senate Agriculture Committee had acted similarly.

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House group, said his committee would reassemble here in December to have a measure ready for quick action at the January session, and similar action by the Senate committee has been suggested. By giving the legislation right of way in January, it is held, the legislation could be enacted in time to apply to the next crop of spring wheat.

Jones reported there still is wide difference among farm leaders on the legislation. Following decision to abandon the legislation for the session, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau Federation, and Earl Smith, Illinois farm leader, called on President Roosevelt to thank him for his efforts to obtain the legislation.

Abandonment Called "Calamity."

They said in a statement that Congress' action "is little short of a national calamity," and predicted that when the members reach home they will "recognize their mistake" and be ready to return in October to rectify it. Smith said the President "assured us of his determination to continue his efforts until adequate surplus control legislation is enacted."

With the wages and hours bill still in House Committee, there was some doubt whether the Rules Committee would grant a rule for early floor consideration. In any event a hot fight over the measure is certain in the House.

Another threat to the Administration program is found in the position given the court bill, behind the housing legislation. Opponents of the original court bill have planned to take up the new measure as soon as the wages and hours vote is taken, and in case the latter is "unduly" delayed by the debate, to lay it aside for the court measure. Whether they will be content to delay their bill until after action on housing is yet to be seen.

Further delay is seen in the effort by Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, to amend the court legislation to require that two-thirds of the Supreme Court concur before an act of Congress can be invalidated.

Sugar Parley Today.

The sugar threat broke suddenly yesterday, and the joint committee's conference with President Roosevelt today likely will have an important bearing on the whole legislative situation. The bill sought, intended to replace the Jones-Costigan measure, would further restrict refined sugar imports from Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Philippines, Cuba and the Virgin Islands, in favor of domestic producers. The Government departments have opposed it on the grounds that it would be unfair to the island possessions and would interfere with the reciprocal trade program with Cuba.

Borah told his sugar-State colleagues "it is absolutely certain that if we permit enactment of the bills the Administration wants, we won't get sugar legislation at this session." At a caucus later in the day, bloc members of both houses voted to stand firm for the bill. Some 75 members were present.

Members of the committee to meet the President include Representatives Cummings, Colorado; Jones, Texas; Robinson, Utah, and Senators O'Mahoney, Wyoming, and Adams, Colorado, all Democrats.

Earlier yesterday Cummings visited the President and later told reporters the chances for the bill appeared brighter than at any time in the past four months. He said he expected to obtain a rule that would place it on the floor of the House within four or five days.

Man Kills Woman And Self Over Child

Buffalo, N. Y., July 28 (AP).—Buell G. Tallman 2d wounded his estranged wife, killed her cook and then committed suicide in a quarrel over his 10-year-old daughter today.

Mrs. Tallman was shot in the leg. The cook, Mrs. Louise Stiehl, 60, died in a hospital.

Assistant Detective Chief Frank J. McCarthy said he learned that Tallman went to his wife's home to visit their daughter, Sally, and evidently attempted to take her away with him.

Thief Carts 3 Homes Away, Brick by Brick

Cincinnati, July 28 (AP).—Police worked tonight on a mystery of three "stolen" buildings. Waymouth Finn, real estate broker, discovered the "theft" when he took a prospective customer to the Walnut Hills section of Cincinnati to inspect the structures.

Finn's chagrin knew no bounds when he found the premises bare of buildings and a colored truck driver hauling away the last of the bricks that had gone into buildings Finn valued at $12,000. Police said a colored man admitted he sold the buildings for $131, but insisted another man instructed him to raze the structures.

15 Die in Crash Of Dutch Plane; 3 Americans

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Belgium, July 28.—A crack airliner from The Netherlands plunged into a potato field near here today, carrying to flaming death all 15 occupants, three of whom were listed as Americans.

Airline officials identified the Americans only as "Mun, Canton and Goldbloom."

There were seven other passengers and five in the crew. One of the passengers was listed as a Mexican named Trillo.

Civil authorities, after a preliminary investigation, said they believed lightning struck the plane.

Many hours after the crash, the shattered and charred bodies of a number of the victims still lay in the smoldering wreckage. Of those removed, only one body was identified immediately, that of Miss Van Deveen, Dutch stewardess.

The plane left Amsterdam at 9:20 a. m., and headed for Paris after a stop in Brussels. It fell near Hal, 10 miles southwest of here.

An eye-witness of the disaster said:

"I saw the plane burst in flames and then crash like a stone in a potato field and explode on contact with the ground, huge flames preventing the approach of onlookers."

Long Beach, July 28 (AP).—An office associate of Ben F. Mun, 35, wealthy oil company executive of Long Beach, said that Mun was among the 15 persons who died in an airliner crash today near Brussels, Belgium. Mun was president of the Humble Oil Co.

Families Apprehensive.

Pittsburgh, July 28 (AP).—Members of the family of 21-year-old Milton Glibert Goldbloom said tonight they feared he was the American Goldbloom killed with 14 others in the crash of an airplane near Brussels, the Netherlands, today. They said he was traveling in Europe on a vacation tour with William Canton, 23, of Uniontown, Pa. Canton's family also was apprehensive, saying that friends had received information several days ago asserting Canton and Goldbloom had intended to make part of their tour by air.

Cuba to Start 'Share Wealth' Plan on Sugar

Batista, the Strong Man, Says Industry Will Be Rebuilt.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, July 28.—Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuba's army chief and strong man, said today that the island's greatest industry, sugar, will be rebuilt as the first step in his plan to redistribute the wealth of the nation "without soaking either the rich or the poor."

The 36-year-old former sergeant explained, for the first time, the important phases of his "three-year-plan," which was announced several weeks ago. The plan covers almost every phase of Cuban economic and social life and is designed to improve the health, education and living conditions of the country's millions of poor.

"This plan is not a leftist or a rightist movement," said the colonel, "but a sensible, feasible plan to make life more enjoyable for the extremely poor but deserving Cuban, while offering ample guarantees to capital."

The Batista plan provides for division of profits in the sugar industry so as to give the worker a larger cash income. Laws will pass on to cane growers and field workers, fixed percentages of the profits.

The sugar program, Col. Batista believes, would give the worker greater security in the "off-season" by alloting to each family a small plot of garden land for raising table crops from June to January. Few of the workers have had any means of support for seven months of the year and they have had no land upon which to raise necessary foodstuffs.

Col. Batista estimates that the project will mean the transfer from the "capitalist" classes to the worker classes of $40,000,000 in profits annually. That, he says, means wider distribution of money, increased buying power and better living conditions.

Similar programs will be applied to such basic industries as petroleum, mineral, tobacco, coffee and agriculture in general.

A land distribution scheme is another important phase of the three-year plan. It provides for the parcelling of small plots of land to capable farmers.

Navy Resorts to Rocking Boat In Effort to Float the Omaha

The Navy yesterday tried "rocking the boat"—a very dangerous practice when engaged in by small boys and men untutored in the niceties of navigation—but the Navy wants to get its light cruiser Omaha floating again, the sooner the better, and isn't concerned about the niceties of anything, including navigation, sometimes called a science.

For the boat-rocking process, the Navy used the destroyer Mahan which, according to advices received at the department here, by cruising back and forth near the grounded Omaha sent great rollers rising in her wake, that, it was hoped, would lift or rock the cruiser off the coral reef near Castle Island Light in the Bahamas where she had been stranded since Monday of last week.

The Navy has mobilized in the vicinity of the stricken Omaha a fleet of vessels and a collection of gear of such proportions as to cause an international incident anywhere but in the Bahamas.

The rescue "squadron" yesterday was composed of the salvage vessels, Kellerig, and Warbler, and the minesweeper, Mallard. The Navy tanker Salinas, with fuel oil and other stores from the Omaha is en route to Guantanamo, Cuba, naval officials said yesterday.

Four destroyers, the Decatur, Leary, Dickerson and Tillman, which were on training cruise with Naval Reserve Divisions arrived at Castle Island yesterday to assist the Omaha.

The Salinas has been unloading fuel oil and stores from the Omaha on the theory that a lighter, ship would be an easier one to refloat, but thus far the theory hasn't worked.

For days the tugs have been trying to pull the Omaha off the reef, but thus far the ship—first of the Navy's light cruisers to be commissioned—has failed to budge.

Divers have been sent down into the clear blue waters and with hoses have tried to move away the sand from the Omaha's bottom, but this frequently successful method of freeing stranded vessels has likewise failed.

So yesterday the Navy pinned it's hopes on "rocking the boat," which isn't quite as unseamanlike as it sounds and sometimes works.

Meanwhile, the cruiser Raleigh which the Omaha was to have replaced has been ordered to remain on duty off the Spanish and French coasts until relieved by the Omaha or some other ship. At the hour of her misfortune, the Omaha, formerly flagship of the special Central American squadron, was en route to the Charleston Navy Yard for overhauling before proceeding to European waters.

U. S. Ready to Move Americans From Peiping If Peril Requires It

War Zone News Is Closely Read By Roosevelt

President May Give Up Cruise to Await Developments.

Plans for evacuation, if necessary, of the hundreds of Americans in war-menaced Peiping were complete last night, while President Roosevelt and his foreign affairs advisers closely scrutinized all dispatches from the danger zone in North China.

As word came of the wounding of a United States Marine who was summoning Americans into the barricaded legation quarter, the President was considering foregoing again his customary week-end cruise on Chesapeake Bay in order to be on hand here for any developments.

Evacuation plans have been worked out long in advance, Secretary of State Hull said yesterday, and conferences between diplomatic representatives of foreign governments and commandants of foreign troops at Peiping have been under way for some time, preparing to meet every problem that might arise affecting the safety of foreigners there. The present situation is an exact example, the Secretary said, of the situation contemplated when provisions were made, following the Boxer uprising, for protection of nationals of other powers.

Chinese Voice Regret.

The wounded Marine, member of the legation guard, was the victim of an error by Chinese troops, it was indicated. He is Private Julius Fliszar, of Easton, Pa., who was shot in the thigh, not seriously, when Chinese soldiers mistook him for a Japanese while he was notifying Americans to take refuge in the legation area.

Gen. Sung Che Yuan, commander of the Chinese Twenty-ninth Army, immediately expressed regret over the incident.

President Roosevelt was represented as giving considerable thought to the question of invoking this country's neutrality act, in case the situation justifies such action, and embargoing war supplies to both Japan and China. No formal declaration of war by either government in the controversy is necessary for the President to act, it was pointed out.

A disposition to wait, however, in the hope that the situation will be ended peaceably has marked the United States policy, and there was no indication that invocation of the neutrality act was in immediate prospect.

The civilian Americans in Peiping, estimated to number 675, would be taken to Tientsin by railroad, under guard, if evacuation became necessary. Naval ships capable of removing them from Tientsin could reach that port in 15 hours, officials here said.

Refugees Given Tents.

Col. John Marston, in command of the embassy Marine guard, said 249 Americans who have taken refuge in the legation area from other parts of the city are being cared for in tents, while others have found accommodations in hotels and boarding houses.

Considerable concern was felt, however, for some 10 or 15 Americans who had chosen to remain in their homes in a part of Peiping, where there has been considerable artillery fire. The embassy at Peiping said Americans had experienced great difficulty in reaching the embassy because of barricades in the streets.

Japanese officials and diplomatic representatives have given repeated assurance of the safety of lives and property of the nationals of other countries, Secretary Hull said yesterday. The same understanding has been reached with the Chinese.

Maintenance of foreign troops in Peiping, formerly Peking, is provided for under a compact that resulted from the Boxer uprising in 1901, when Chinese fanatics bent on killing all aliens in the city, trapped foreign residents and besieged them for two months, before they could be rescued. In addition to the Marine Guard of 500 men, the United States has about 1,000 soldiers stationed at Tientsin, 130 miles from Peiping.

Officials yesterday reported the Navy has 39 ships, with 313 officers and 4,537 men in Far Eastern waters, available in an emergency to protect Americans.

London, July 28 (AP).—Ambassador Robert W. Bingham, of the United States, and Quo Tai-Chi, of China, today discussed the Sino-Japanese situation with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

An informed source said Bingham's visit to Eden was merely an "exchange of views in which the Ambassador told Eden the latest official information about China in his possession and the foreign secretary did likewise."

Neither the United States nor the Chinese Embassy made an official announcement concerning the talks.

Chinatown Scans News Bulletins From the Front

Washington's Chinatown was seething with excitement last night as news of the success of Chinese arms came through. Groups (above), gathered about news bulletins prepared in Chinese characters by Joseph Chiang, Washington correspondent for China papers.

tonomous regime over which Japanese maintain some control.

Chinese reports from Peiping were that Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan, chairman of the Hopei-Chahar provincial government and commander of the Twenty-ninth Chinese Army, had left the city for Paotingfu.

Gen. Chang Tsu-chung, commander of the Thirty-eighth Chinese Division of the army, had taken charge at Peiping, Chinese said. This might be a favorable omen for Japanese demands—inasmuch as Gen. Chang is credited with being more "pro-Japanese" and inclined to accede to Japan's wish for political and economic domination of North China.

First reports of today's fighting were that Japanese had opened fire from their positions in railway stations, in an effort to clear the railway approaches into the city.

Fighting also was reported within the Japanese concession and at the border of Tientsin's Chinese city.

Begin to Regain Control.

With the coming of daylight the Japanese seemed to recover from their surprise over the Chinese attacks and appeared to be regaining control of a major portion of the East Station. Firing lessened in that area.

Despite Chinese claims that they had captured the Japanese air base east of the city, Japanese planes could be seen still using the air field. Japanese planes were bombing Chinese positions on two sides of the field in a determined effort to hold it.

The fate of Peiping meanwhile was clouded.

The last remaining telegraph line from Peiping to Tientsin went dead at 6:45 a. m. today. Peiping's only communication with the outside world was through limited radio facilities.

Earlier, Japanese war planes had warned the populace of Peiping and environs to flee before a new Japanese offensive in the North China battle zone.

The fleet dropped leaflets on the countryside threatening a drive after daybreak to expel the Chinese army from the area where forces swirled in bitter combat yesterday.

Most of Peiping's 675 American residents were encamped inside the embassy quarter. United States Marines set up emergency provisions to care for them.

Chinese Claim Victories.

The Japanese aerial warning began the second day of what had become undisguised, although un declared, war. Chinese commanders claimed possession of important Japanese positions after sanguinary day-long fighting on a major scale yesterday.

Chinese and Japanese counterclaims, however, hid the true military situation.

Against the Chinese assertions, Japanese officers declared their forces held six strategic Chinese centers north, east and south of Peiping, and were "rapidly closing the pincers" on the former Chinese capital.

PRIVATE JULIUS FLISZAR, of the mounted U. S. Marine attachment at Peiping, was wounded by unaimed Chinese rifle fire from Chinese troops near the American Embassy in Peiping. He was the first U. S. casualty.

Abandon Hope of Peace.

Both sides openly abandoned any hope of a peaceful settlement of their long-smoldering hostilities in North China. Although neither formally severed diplomatic relations or declared war, both officially proclaimed their reliance on force.

(In Nanking, the Central Chinese government accepted "the issue of battle" and high officials deliberated breaking formal relations with Japan.

(The Chinese continue to claim sweeping victories over Japanese forces in North China. It was announced in government circles that the Japanese had withdrawn from a large area around Langfang, westward as far as Wanping. They said this area included the city of Tungchow. They were highly elated over initial victories.

(There were unconfirmed reports that Central Chinese forces were extending along the southern borders of the war zone and preparing to join actively in the conflict.

(The Japanese House of Representatives cheered Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye's declaration in Tokyo that Japan would resort to arms and unanimously approved a $30,000,000 war appropriation.)

Observers here expected valiant Chinese resistance to Japan's punitive campaign against the strongly anti-Japanese Twenty-ninth Army, and feared the war might become a drawn-out conflict spread across much of eastern Asia.

Americans in Cellars.

Tokyo, (Thursday) July 29 (By telephone to New York) (AP).—The second day of Japan's undeclared war in North China took on a graver phase this morning, with fighting in the suburbs of Tientsin and with American residents reported seeking safety in basements.

Bursting shells were reported to have fallen into the Japanese concession, the Japanese consulate general's buildings, and the Japanese Club.

Telephone lines were reported severed between the Japanese concession and the outside world.

The Domei (Japanese) News Agency correspondent at Peiping said that the Japanese army's plans in North China are proceeding smoothly.

Report Chinese Repulses.

The Chinese forces have lost ground, the correspondent advised, and are unable to counter attack in the vicinity of Peiping.

"Another new development which will determine the future course of North China," Domei says, "is expected within a few days."

Japanese newspapers say Japanese military authorities in North China, rejecting peace overtures by the Chinese Hopei-Chahar political council based on withdrawal of thirty-seventh division Chinese troops, continue to sweep out remnants of the Chinese troops from the Peiping area.

The Japanese army now is said to occupy the towns of Nanyuan, Fengtai and Wanpinghsien, among others near Peiping.

Although fighting in North China reached a grave stage the Japanese government, according to the Tokyo press, still resents any suggestion of foreign intervention.

The Nichi Nichi says that in view of the fact that the powers' possible joint action is likely to be more serious than that during the Manchurian incident the Japanese government now is devising means to cope with "third power interference."

Nichi Nichi adds that the government is especially watching Great Britain's future action with the greatest concern and declares that yesterday's joint Anglo-American representations to the Japanese government are considered to have been made under British influence.

The local newspapers continued to emphasize Premier Fumimaro Konoye's declaration that Japan wants an outright settlement of all outstanding Sino-Japanese issues and not merely liquidation of the present North China situation.

Announcing in the diet that the government had suspended Anglo-Japanese conversations in London looking to the promotion of interests of both governments in China, as well as at home, Foreign Minister Koki Hirota said it is apparent that no Anglo-Japanese agreement regarding assistance to China would be of any practical value in view of the present disturbed situation.

In spite of large scale fighting in North China and the enormous cost involved, the Japanese nation remained calm and seemingly almost indifferent.

United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew today drew a Japanese assurance American lives and property in Peiping would be protected.

The Ambassador in a meeting with Foreign Minister Kohi Hirota appealed to Japan to prevent the spread of the Sino-Japanese conflict and requested that great care be exercised to keep the American Embassy in Peiping from falling into the war zone.

Hirota declared the Japanese army would leave nothing undone to protect Americans and other foreigners and asserted Japan had not yet abandoned hope of an amicable settlement in North China.

Fight at Shanghai.

Shanghai, (Thursday) July 29 (AP). War tension hit Shanghai today, causing thousands of Chinese to flee with their movable possessions into the foreign-controlled international settlement and the French concession. Many of them came, with furniture and valuables, from Chapei, scene of Chinese fighting in 1932, and other Chinese towns around Shanghai.

D.C. Income Tax To Be Dropped By Conferees

$1.75 Real Estate Levy Considered; Agreement Expected Today.

istration of the tax and to make any recommendations they deem advisable as to amendments.

A two-fifths of 1 per cent tax on the gross income of business and professional men, it was estimated, will raise approximately $3,000,000.

The $1.75 realty tax was proposed, it is understood, as a compromise between the $1.70 tax voted by the House and the $1 levy on land alone that was adopted by the Senate. This tax would raise around $3,100,000. More than the present $1.50 levy.

Total estimates thus would run as follows:

Business privilege	3,000,000
Realty	3,100,000
Insurance	200,000
Personal property (increase)	500,000
Estate inheritance	800,000
Total	$7,600,000

Margin of $600,000.

This is $600,000 more than the current deficit, but District officials do not expect the full return from all taxes this year.

Revenue from these levies, on the other hand, might exceed these estimates. Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen, for instance, has predicted that the strengthening of the law relative to intangible personal property taxes will raise an additional $1,000,000 instead of $500,000.

The conferees were in session an hour and three-quarters. Only three of the House managers were present. They were Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland; Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, and Short (Republican), of Missouri.

Senators in attendance were Chairman King (Democrat), of Utah; McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada; Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland; Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

If agreement is reached this morning, a report may be adopted by both houses before the end of the week.

Regarding the rider on the tax bill, Representative Celler last night said:

"Despite statements made in the Senate last Friday, that the Administration had withdrawn its objections to the Miller-Tydings bill, I can say on the highest authority, that the Administration has not withdrawn its objections to this obnoxious, anti-consumer, price-fixing bill.

"Futhermore, I also say on the highest authority that several Cabinet officials have protested the passage of this rider to the District of Columbia tax bill.

"Recent press reports suggest that the rider may insure early passage of the District of Columbia tax bill. In truth and in fact the reverse is the case. Resentment aroused by the tactics of the proponents of this rider is rapidly imperiling passage of the tax bill itself."

Japan Pits 18,000 Against Peiping's Forces of 60,000

Nanking, July 28 (AP).—Estimates of Chinese and Japanese military strength tonight credited China with a greater force under arms, but with inferior discipline, organization and equipment.

The Twenty-ninth Chinese army, which the Japanese demanded withdrawn from in and near Peiping, 60,000 men.

Forces under Gen. Han Fu-Chu in Shantung, Hopei's southeastern neighbor, 50,000.

Forces under Marshal Yen Hsi-Shan in Shansi, Hopei's western neighbor, 30,000.

It was estimated there were 170 divisions (and each between 14,000 16,000 men) under the banner of the Nanking government, of which 100 actually are available. Thirty-eight were listed as reorganized, first-quality divisions.

The central government also has 300 first-class fighting aircraft at scattered bases.

In contrast, it was estimated in Tientsin that Japanese effectives in the Tientsin-Peiping area numbered 18,000 men.

The aerial strength in Tientsin was estimated at 90 airplanes.

3 Killed in Collision.

Salem, Conn., July 28 (AP).—Three residents of Rockville, Conn., bound on a fishing trip, were killed here today in a head-on crash of an automobile and a bakery truck.

D. C. Able to Meet Pay Roll Saturday

There is no danger of the District's failing to meet its pay roll Saturday, despite a shortage of funds, according to Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor, yesterday.

"We're still paying our bills and salaries," he said, "and have money enough to hold out through early August. By that time we hope to have a tax bill through."

His statement laid at rest reports funds were geting critically low here. Maj. Donovan, however, declined to give out the figures for the District's bank balance.

12 Are Rescued In $25,000 Fire At Winchester

11 Overcome, Carried from Blazing Building in Business Area.

Winchester, Va., July 28 (AP).—A dozen men, women and children were carried down ladders to safety today as fire swept through two floors of a three-story business building in Winchester's business district.

Flames cut off their escape by the only stairway and 11 occupants were overcome by smoke from the fire, of as yet undetermined origin. Brought down the ladders, they were revived at the Winchester hospital.

Firefighters held the blaze to the second and third stories, but store stocks on the first floor were damaged by water. Firemen estimated the total loss at $25,000.

The building was without fire escapes. State Fire Marshal Travers, here on an inspection trip, said he went over the building yesterday with Herman H. Hable, the owner, and urged the installation of outside escapes.

Hable said insurance covered damage to the building.

Cause of the fire remained unknown tonight. One occupant of an apartment in the building saidhe had trouble yesterday with an electric light socket, fire spurting out. He had repairs made, however.

Herman H. Hable, owner of the building, expressed opinion the fire turned from outside through the second-story porch flooring.

Among those overcome by smoke were Mr. and Mrs. John Silter and son; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wharton, George Gentry, F. T. Ritenour, Mrs. Bernie Carpenter, Garner Windle, Wilbur McCarty and Miss Annie Wigginton.

Police Capt. Thomas Boyd said he heard screams of women and children trapped in their rooms and by what he described as a sheet of flame and acrid smoke that swept along a porch-like corridor. Long, narrow porches extended along the rear of the building on the second and third floors.

The building's occupants clustered about windows, crying for help and treatening to jump. Firemen quickly ran up ladders and brought them down. One woman had already jumped from a second-floor window, but was not injured.

2 Die, Score Hurt in Fire.

New York, July 28 (AP).—Two men were burned to death and a score of others injured early today in a fire that swept the Home Hotel, a small Bowery lodging house.

Jackson Denies Tax Evasion by Mrs. Roosevelt

did not try to capitalize on it. If it had been a 'clever little scheme' she would not have gone to the Bureau of Internal Revenue with all the facts and asked for an opinion before she began broadcasting."

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), New York, who first called attention to the situation, is not a member of the committee, and thus Treadway assumed the burden of seeking a definite ruling on Mrs. Roosevelt's status.

The points at issue were whether Mrs. Roosevelt's method of signing over the proceeds of the broadcast directly to charity did not constitute tax avoidance; whether the advance ruling she obtained from the Bureau of Internal Revenue was a matter of special privilege and contrary to general practice, and whether the method used was a tax-law loophole through which other persons could escape taxation.

No Tax on Charity.

Jackson said:

"Even her critics will hardly contend it would be possible for Mrs. Roosevelt, after cutting herself off from all income for her broadcasts, to also continue to be out of pocket for a tax on income she did not get. Her only alternative was to reduce the benefit to charity by the amount of the tax, which is equivalent to taxing the charity itself. That is not the policy of the law."

"Amen! Amen!" said Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, committee member.

But Treadway could not reconcile in his own mind the assertion of Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill that the Internal Revenue Bureau was open to inquiry on tax liabilities in cases where the transactions involving income had been completed, with the Jackson assertion that Mrs. Roosevelt had submitted the proposal to the Treasury before entering into a contract.

Jackson said he was not certain, but believed the contract had not been signed at the time Mrs. Roosevelt made inquiry.

He declared he believed the informal ruling had been given Mrs. Roosevelt before her first broadcast, and stressed that it was an informal opinion rather than a precise ruling. In all such cases it was the bureau practice to avoid dealing with uncompleted transactions or hypothetical questions, he declared, and reminded the committee that rulings made on personal advice are often upset later by court decisions, so that the bureau may sometimes be forced to sue for taxes in cases where it had given other advice.

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, asked Jackson whether the opinion given Mrs. Roosevelt was written or oral.

Jackson, stressing again the informal nature of the advice, said it was oral and that strictly speaking she had not been advised by the bureau.

Students of Six Schools End Six Weeks at Fort Washington.

The parade ground of historic Fort Washington was the scene of a colorful ceremony yesterday, marking the close of a six-week Infantry Reserve Officers' Training Corps camp. About 450 student soldiers, representing 20 colleges and universities within the Third Corps Area, marched in review before Brig. Gen. Dana T. Merrill.

It was Gen. Merrill's first appearance since his assignment as commander of the Twelfth Brigade. Other reviewing officers were Lieut. Col. J. D. Patch and Col. J. C. Drain. The Twelfth Infantry Band played for the review, which was conducted entirely by student officers. Benjamin F. Ruggiero, University of Pennsylvania senior, was student battalion commander.

Students from neighboring institutions who received citations from Gen. Merrill include Robert B. Nolan, Georgetown University, and Benjamin C. McCloskey, University of Maryland, named the outstanding students from their schools; Robert L. Mattingly, University of Maryland, champion pistol shot of the camp, and George A. Bowman and Ralph A. Collins, jr., University of Maryland, both among the ten highest rifle shots in the camp.

Virginian Takes Honors.

McCloskey was also named honor student of Company C. The camp honor student was Albert H. Fiedler, Virginia Military Institute. W. L. Bennett, University of Maryland, was one of the winners on the boxing contests.

In a brief address Gen. Merrill congratulated the men on their appearance and told them "the reserve is the greatest part of our national defense."

Preparations for leaving camp included turning in their Army uniforms, most of which are somewhat the worse for wear. Several of the District boys displayed tough-soled military shoes which, new at the opening of the camp, looked as though a Great Dane had been chewing on them. The heels were entirely gone, and large holes gaped in the soles.

Day Began at 5:45.

"The schedule went something like this: Quarter of 6 you got up; 6:15, you had breakfast; 6:30, you wished you hadn't; 7:30, monkey drill (calisthenics to you), then a hike to some field for maneuvers, miles and miles through bushes covered with blackberries that you couldn't stop to eat."

"The funny part," another interpolated, "was that they told us to bring tennis rackets. Sure! We have tennis courts, a swimming pool, a gym. But the only time we had a minute to use them was Wednesdays, and then we were too tired."

All agreed they had had a good time despite the rigorous routine. One point in its favor, they said, was the fact that, although taps was sounded every night, the bugler never had much of an audience. They could stay out as late as they liked; 25 per cent of them had cars, and Washington is only 16 miles away.

40 From Washington.

Training was given in infantry weapons, leadership, tactical problems and physical education. About 40 Washington residents were among those enrolled. One term in camp is required of students attending schools in which there are R. O. T. C. units.

The majority of the boys came from colleges in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia, although Tennessee Military Institute and the University of Alabama sent a few.

Other institutions represented were Augusta Military Academy, Fishburne Military School, Fork Union Military Academy, Drexel Institute of Technology, Gettysburg College, Johns Hopkins University, Lafayette College, Lehigh University, Pennsylvania Military College, Pennsylvania State College, Staunton Military Academy, Tennessee Military Institute, Valley Forge Military Academy, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and Western Maryland College.

Navy to Open Bids For 4 New Vessels

Bids of private shipbuilders will be opened here on four of the eight new destroyers for which funds have been appropriated, the Navy Department announced yesterday. A fund of $130,000,000 has been made available for replacement of vessels.

Capt. Henry Williams, of the bureau of construction and repair, said the new ships will be of 1,500 tons displacement, and of the same type as those now under construction, but incorporating some minor changes.

Mother Kills Boys And Takes Poison

Henderson, N. C., July 28 (AP).—Two sons of Mrs. P. R. Overby, 31-year-old farm woman, died today of bullet wounds which, Coroner Asa Paschall said, were inflicted by their mother, because she wanted them "to go to heaven."

Mrs. Overby was at a hospital here, apparently seriously ill. The coroner said she took poison after shooting John Russell, 7, and Jimmie Davis, 6 months.

gated "to five men the authority to decide for themselves the proper minimum work week for all the vast and diversified industries of the country."

Vandenberg digressed into a bitter attack on the Wagner relations act and what he called its "one-way street" directed solely against employers.

The Michigan Senator proposed amendments to increase labor union responsibility and grant employers new rights under the Wagner act. He agreed not to press them as a wages and hours rider only after Chairman Hugo L. Black, of the Senate Labor Committee, consented to "full and impartial hearings" on his proposal.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, had jumped speedily to defense of the Wagner act. He said Vandenberg's amendments would be "destructive" to labor's rights, and quoted from a letter President William Green of the American Federation of Labor wrote to Senate Majority Leader Barkley.

Protests Restrictions.

"We protest," Green wrote, "the proposed amendments because we cannot accept restrictions jeopardizing the future freedom and democracy of the membership of the American Federation of Labor—restrictions which result from a reaction to sporadic acts of irresponsible alleged labor organizations."

Majority Leader Barkley called the Senate to meet an hour early today, as a welter of amendments and threatened further debate on the wages and hours bill seemed likely to block plans for a vote by tonight.

Only one amendment went to a record vote yesterday, and that was overwhelmingly crushed—a proposal by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican), Massachusetts, asking sharp restrictions on imports from countries failing to meet proposed American labor standards.

The Lodge plan would have established a quota for foreign imports, based on a five-year average. Countries could not go over that quota unless they measured up to the bill's standards. The Senate voted it down 19 to 57.

Questioned by Borah.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, took the floor to question feasibility of the plan. He asked what yardstick could be used to determine if a country was meeting our standards, and pointed out a vast personnel and check-up would be required.

Lodge granted a large staff would be necessary, but he cited inconsistency of denying shipment of unfair labor goods, from Massachusetts to Alabama, for example, but placing no restrictions on unfair shipments from Czechoslovakia to Alabama.

Other amendments offered, but not yet voted upon, included one by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, to set up State advisory boards named at the request of the new Labor Standards Board; and an amendment by Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, to defer execution of the new Labor Board's orders until 60 days after publication.

The Wagner-Van Nuys antilynching bill was offered as a rider by Senator Royal S. Copeland Democrat), New York, but almost immediately withdrawn when Senator Wagner protested it should be considered on its merits. Copeland, who made the same attempt on the recent train limit bill, announced he would insist on an antilynching vote before the session is out.

Still awaiting a vote are amendments by Senator Johnson, of Colorado, to eliminate child labor features so it can be handled in separate legislation, and a proposal by Senate Minority Leader McNary to exempt fish, fruit and vegetable canneries from the wages and hours measure.

Proposed by Wood.

The latest drastic change in the House wages and hours bill was made by the House group yesterday on motion of Representative Reuben T. Wood, of Missouri, former president of the Missouri Federation of Labor. Both Wood and Chairman Norton, who also voted for the amendment, were recent White House visitors.

New powers for the proposed board in maintaining "a minimum standard of living necessary for health, efficiency and general well being," in the Wood amendment, provide:

1. That the board shall not "establish a minimum wage of less than 40 cents an hour, or a minimum wage which will give employes not receiving more than such minimum wage an annual income in excess of $1,200, or an hourly income in excess of 70 cents, except for overa maximum work week of less than time, night and special work."

2. The board shall not "establish 35 hours, nor of more than 40 hours."

These standards could be ordered whenever the board found that collective bargaining agreements on wages and hours do not cover a "substantial portion" of the workers in any occupation, or collective bargaining facilities are "inadequate."

Cost of living, value of services rendered, wages paid for like work under collective bargaining agreements, and wages paid by employers voluntarily maintaining minimum standards would be considered by the board in establishing the wage level. Relation of the work to the economic and physical health of the workers, persons available for the work, and hours established for like work under collective bargaining agreements or by employers voluntarily complying, would be considered in fixing hours limits.

Vandenberg, in his attack on the more moderate Senate legislation, said it gave the five-man board power over price-fixing and power over "the very creating and existence of jobs." While the country is still undergoing adjustments under the Wagner act, Vandenberg said the bill might place industry in a "straitjacket."

Learning of Vandenberg's proposed rider to the wages and hours bill, increasing labor organization responsibility under the Wagner act, President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, meantime wrote Senator Barkley in protest.

"The American Federation of Labor regards these amendments (Vandenberg's) as a bold attempt to restrict the freedom of self-organization of the workers," wrote Green.

Green said some of Vandenberg's proposed "unfair labor practices" provide for "an extent of regulation of unions by the Government that falls little short of the example set by Fascist Germany."

Chincoteague Begins Annual Pony Roundup

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chincoteague, Va., July 28.—Out through the waving marsh grass of the coastal wilderness of Chincoteague, men and wild ponies ran today in the opening round-up of the island's annual pony penning, when oyster tongers and the untamed progeny of horses brought by the Spaniard to the New World reenact a Western rodeo on the eastern outpost of Virginia.

Men, some mounted, some on foot, beat the marshland brush, and the shaggy horses, stout as an oysterman's arm and swift as the Atlantic gales that batter these barren shores, were driven across deep water channels and into pens at Chincoteague, where tomorrow there will be prizes for those who can ride them and fine animals for saddle or plow for those who buy.

Tonight it developed that this year's penning and sale will be larger and therefor more colorful than ever with addition of some 200 wild ponies rounded up at Hog Island, 25 miles to the south of Chincoteague on the Atlantic Coast line.

C. A. Showard, director of the pony penning, said today that many residents of Chincoteague had gone to Hog Island and that their herds too would be in the pens.

Chincoteague will cut loose tomorrow for a day of adventure and fun for which its residents have pent up a whole year's desire for diversion—since the last pony roundup.

As though the spectacle of a huge horse auction and real "wild west bronco busting," could not possibly be enough the managers of the show had ready tonight a day-long program of side attractions that will bring, among other things, an old-time carnival with its merry go round within the roundup.

Not the least of the day's attractions will be the races for 1 mile for which the swiftest of the "tame" ponies have been posted as entrants.

The program also includes a 2-mile boat race between Coast Guard district teams, race between teams of the Sixth District, and four boxing matches.

Court Reform Survey Is Plan Of Both Sides

recommendations from the Attorney General and the Judicial Council. This is one subject that will be further explored under the Burke-Hatch resolution.

They ask an appropriation of $7,500 from the contingent fund to make the special study, with power to take sworn testimony and sit when Congress is in or out of session.

Specifically, the proposed special committee of five would be "directed to make a full and complete investigation and study of all matters relating to the rorganization of the courts of the United States, the appointment of additional judges for any such courts and the reform of judicial procedure with respect to which any bills or resolutions (including proposing amendments to the Constitution of the United States), have heretofore been introduced in the Senate, or may hereafter be introduced."

An effort to get speedy action on the new lower court reform bill reported by McCarran, by calling it up immediately after wages and hours action, or even laying aside the Black bill if debate is protracted, was disclosed yesterday. The reform measure has been written on the base of the Sumners bill, previously passed by the House, so further House action is unnecessary. It would go immediately to conference after passage by the Senate.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE
Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Egypt Acclaims King on Eve of Enthronement

Crownless Farouk I Will Begin Reign in Land Wholly at Peace.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, July 28.—Wildly jubilant throngs made merry tonight in acclaim to Farouk I, who will be invested formally tomorrow as King of Misr, Lord of Nubia and the Sudan and Sovereign of Kordofan and Darfour.

Farouk's father, King Fuad I, died last April, and a regency took charge, awaiting the day when Farouk would be 18. According to the Moslem calendar the day comes tomorrow, although by the Christian calendar Farouk will not be 18 until next February 11.

Since Faud's death, Great Britain and Egypt have signed a treaty ending the 55-year British military occupation of Egypt and making the country an independent monarchy friendly to Britain.

Never before have all the sects and political creeds of the Nile Valley seen most of their aspiration realized as in the regime which the slim boy ruler will head.

There is no evidence of bitter party strife, which during Faud's reign resulted often in bloody rioting between the Wafd home-rule faction and the pro-British faction.

Farouk will be strictly a constitutional monarch, as his father was forced to be during the last months of his life. Farouk will have none of the dictatorial powers which the 1930 constitution gave the old King; the constitution was abrogated in December, 1935, and the 1923 constitution, modifying the monarch's powers, was re-enforced.

The hitherto unruly Wafd party virtually is satisfied now, realizing that the safety of Egypt depends on Britain, guarantor of its defense, in view of Mediterranean rivalries.

The party is willing to defer pressing its claim for complete recovery of the Sudan, the vast region south of Egypt which is governed now by a joint Anglo-Egyptian regime.

Farouk is scheduled to leave Abdin Palace at 8:30 a. m. in a royal coach, accompanied by a procession of bright red automobiles.

First of the festivals will take place August 3 at 7:45 p. m., and consist of a festival concert by the Marine Band and a dance by the Lisa Gardiner group.

Loyalists Rush Troops to Meet New Offensive

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Border, July 28.—With the struggle west of Madrid seemingly deadlocked, Spanish insurgents tonight claimed conquest of more than 700 square miles in the Cuenca sector, midway between Madrid and Valencia.

An insurgent communique said the Valencia government was hurrying a brigade of foreign soldiers and other reinforcements in the hope of checking a smashing insurgent offensive.

Government troops had begun to throw up fortifications around Cuenca, about 90 miles east and slightly south of Madrid, the communique reported.

(Madrid dispatches said that the combat west of Madrid had settled down to artillery dueling as both armies dug in. The insurgents' next objective, now that they have taken the village of Brunete, 15 miles from Madrid, was Villaneuva de la Canada.

(Should that town fall before Gen. Francisco Franco's men, the insurgents will have regained virtually everything they lost during the government's recent offensive, designed to shake loose Franco's troops on the very edge of Madrid.)

Diplomatic dispatches from insurgent sources in Spain reported Gen. Franco had communted the death sentence of Manuel Hedilla, former chief of the Spanish Fascist party, to life imprisonment. Hedilla was condemned by a court martial for conspiring against Franco.

'Phobic Poet's Wife Given 2d Divorce

Madison, Wis., July 28 (AP).—Mrs. William Ellery Leonard, young wife of the 61-year-old University of Wisconsin poet, who cannot leave the campus because of a "distance phobia," was granted a divorce for the second time by Circuit Judge A. C. Hoppmann today.

Dusty Redskins May Not Get Thunderbird Back After All

Museum's Head on Way to Europe, Return of 'Sacred Bundle' to Tribe Apparently Will Be Delayed for a While.

The office of Indian affairs yesterday reported a set-back in efforts to recapture the Gros Ventres tribe's thunderbird, and two developments in the case that probably have set the Indians to singing more loudly "it ain't gonna rain no more."

For the necessary background: The Gros Ventres had kept the thunderbird for 180 years, according to Chief Long Bull. The thunderbird, a sacred object, had told the North Dakota tribe that as long as they kept him they should never want rain. Several years ago, the Heye Foundation Museum in New York obtained the thunderbird. It reposes there now and the clamoring Indians claim they can't get any rain.

They have been clamoring ever since the thunderbird was taken away. The clamoring grew very loud recently and the office of Indian affairs undertook representations to the museum. And up to yesterday it seemed that the bird would be restored to the tribe.

But comes the set-back, the two developments: The office has learned that the head of the museum is on his way to Europe and won't be back until October. Gros Ventres are en route to Washington to protest and demand the bird's return.

The latter report could not be confirmed at the office, but nevertheless has been taken note of there.

The thunderbird is referred to here as a "sacred bundle," composed of sticks and feathers. Frequently the Indians have referred to a "skull," but the office of Indian affairs could not identify this. The Indians complain that the object was sold—without authority—to the museum for $175. They blame all of the Dakota dry weather on its absence.

Data Show Police Role in Crime Curb

A definite ratio between the amount of crime and the number of police employes in the cities of the United States has been found by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Based on crime figures for the calendar year of 1936, the F. B. I. has prepared an analysis which reveals cities with the larger number of police per unit population have less crime.

Cities having an average of slightly more than 2 police to 1,000 inhabitants reported 5 murders per 100,000 population, while cities having an average of approximately 1 officer per 1,000 inhabitants have slightly less than 10 murders per 100,000 population.

Golden Jubilee Observed Here By Ohev Sholom

Congregation Dedicates Remodled Synagogue at Fifth and I.

During the half century the Ohev Sholom Congregation has been established in Washington it has mothered six younger orthodox congregations in various parts of the city. Representatives from these and other Jewish congregations gathered at the mother synagogue, at Fifth and I streets northwest, last night to celebrate its golden jubilee anniversary and to dedicate the remodeled church structure.

More than $30,000 has been spent modernizing the brick building. It has been redecorated, made fireproof, and has all new pews. A commodious balcony with an indirect lighting system has been added, and the exterior painted white.

The congregation's first meeting place in the District, in 1887, was a temporary structure on Indiana avenue. After a few months, however, meetings were held in the present structure, which was already between 20 and 30 years old and had been used as a church by another denomination.

Benjamin Ourisman was chairman of arrangements for the joint celebration. Three members of Congress were among the guests—Representatives Manuel Celler, of New York, and William Citron and Herman Kopplemann, of Connecticut. Col. Julius I. Peyser represented the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Members of the building committee were: Nathan Plotnick, chairman, Jacob Bass, B. Hayman, M. Levinson, Jacob Minkoff, Samuel Gritz, S. H. Blank, Max Goldberg, Rabbi Green, William R. Floam, B. Jaffe and Samuel Rosin.

Officers of the congregation are Mr. Bass, president; Mr. Jaffee, vice president; Israel Levinson, treasurer; Mr. Goldberg, recording secretary; Mr. Floam, financial secretary. Trustees are Nathan Cafritz, Samuel Dworkin, Samuel Alloy, Mr. Blank and Mr. Hayman.

Mrs. Rita Callahan, Justice Aide, Dead

Mrs. Rita E. Callahan died yesterday at her home in the Montana Apartments, 1726 M street northwest. She is survived by her husband, Thomas F. X. Callahan.

Mr. and Mrs. Callahan were the first married couple admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States. Mrs. Callahan had long been engaged in legal work for the Department of Justice. She was an active member of the District of Columbia Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Daughters of 1812. Mrs. Callahan was a native of Kansas City, Kan.

Funeral services will be held Saturday morning at St. Matthew's Catholic Church. Interment will be in Kansas City.

Mrs. Witherspoon Funeral Is Today

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. today in the Hysong funeral parlor, 1300 N street northwest, for Mrs. Eleanor Witherspoon, widow of Thomas Witherspoon, Washington patent attorney, who died Monday at Atlantic City, N. J.

Mrs. Witherspoon will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery beside the grave of her husband who graduated from the Naval Academy with the class of 1883.

She had lived in Washington for about 40 years, making her home in the Cortland Apartments, 1760 Euclid street northwest. She spent her summers at Alantic City. Her death followed an illness of several days. Mrs. Witherspoon was the former Eleanor Poole, of New York.

Edison's Associate, John Howell, Dies

New York, July 28 (AP).—John White Howell, 79, close associate of Thomas A. Edison and winner of the 1924 Edison medal for work on the incandescent lamp, died in the Presbyterian Hospital of pneumonia today. His home was in Newark, N. J.

Howell went to work for Edison in 1881. He introduced in this country from Italy the pump invention for vacuum bulbs. He brought the first Tungsten lamps here from Germany. Howell also invented a widely used voltmeter.

Fat Girl Laughs and Grows Slim

Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat. Adv.

Strike Losses.

In the intervals between major battles along the labor front the public is likely to forget that we have not yet developed an adequate mechanism for dealing with such disturbances. The need for a constructive labor policy that would afford a basis for peaceful collective bargaining is brought home when a large section of the public is inconvenienced by strikes or lockouts. But scattered and sporadic disturbances seldom attract the attention that they deserve outside the localities immediately affected.

For that reason it is salutary to have public attention directed to the waste and loss attributable to the current epidemic of strikes. The Federal Reserve System's index of industrial production, for instance, shows a decline in June by a more than seasonal amount for the first time since March, 1936. The chief cause of this recession was labor difficulties in the steel mills. The Labor Department also estimates that 4,500,000 man-days of work were lost last month because of strikes.

Such losses of working time are reflected in a shrinkage of buying power which, in turn, retards business activity over a wide area. The reduction in profits of concerns immediately involved in industrial conflicts may be offset to some extent by increased returns to rival concerns. The retarding effect of strikes upon general business may also be obscured by the strong upward trend of activity. But whatever the averages show, there is no getting around the fact that workers and managements must pay a heavy price for the privilege of waging industrial warfare.

It is to the interest of both labor and capital to devise methods of settling disputes that do not entail the "unreasonable and unnecessary losses" about which Chairman Sloan of the General Motors Corporation complains so bitterly Toward Judicial Reform.

With two notable exceptions, the bill recommended to the Senate by its Judiciary Committee conforms to the agreement which ended the fight over enlargement of the Supreme Court. In every respect it is a measure of judicial reform. At the close of a historic controversy over the judicial function, these changes were adopted by the committee without objection. Similarly unanimous approval might well be accorded the bill in both the Senate and House.

Unnecessary confusion has prevailed in the lower courts because the Attorney General has not had authority to intervene in suits challenging the constitutionality of Congressional acts. By granting him this right, Congress will make it possible for the Government's viewpoint to be presented whenever the validity of an act is challenged. That will be a significant gain in orderly procedure.

Closely related to this change is the Connally amendment, requiring a three-judge court to restrain enforcement of a Federal law alleged to be unconstitutional. Although this provision was not included in the agreement of July 22, it is no less important than the other proposed reforms. Before citizens are permitted to hold up operation of the law, the least that can be asked is the opinion of three judges as to whether the petitioners' constitutional rights are in danger.

When these two changes are linked with the provision for direct appeal of certain adverse decisions to the Supreme Court, they constitute a substantial measure of judicial reform. If the bill is enacted, it will be possible to ascertain the status of experimental statutes within a reasonably short period. The administration of justice would thus be improved in tempo as well as in quality.

The most disappointing aspect of the bill is its failure to make provision for the appointment of new district judges in areas where dockets are congested. Senator O'Mahoney's memorandum of the agreement in the Judiciary Committee clearly shows that new judges were to be authorized on the basis of need, with no relation to the age of present judges. But the committee now plans merely to ask advice of the Attorney General and the Judicial Conference as to where additional judges are needed.

After surveying data prepared by the Attorney General, the Judicial Conference positively recommended the appointment of four additional district judges at its October, 1936, session. No doubt all the data needed to show where additional judges are needed is already available. It is unfortunate that the committee has not provided for new appointments where the courts are obviously unable to keep abreast of the cases submitted to them. Failure to grapple with this problem now may preclude the authorization of additional judges for a number of years.

Far more disappointing, however, is Senator Minton's attempt to graft on this bill an amendment requiring a two-thirds vote in the Supreme Court to invalidate any measure on constitutional grounds. His proposal is completely out of keeping with the Judiciary Committee agreement. It can serve only to reopen the wounds inflicted by the recent Supreme Court fight and to jeopardize the genuine reform measure. The Senate is in no mood for another battle on this issue. Legislators on both sides of the original court debate should find common cause in defeating this move before further mischief is done.

Adjournment And Prestige.

The present Congress has been in session since January 5. In a few days it will have been continuously at work for seven months. And it is clear that no great national emergency, compelling protracted continuation of its efforts, now exists.

Aside from this, the Supreme Court controversy has aroused passions and created antagonisms which have shattered the unity of the majority party in both houses. The tragic death of Senator Robinson has brought home to the Nation the strain under which its lawmakers have been operating. There is abundant evidence that the atmosphere on Capitol Hill is not now such as to encourage careful, dispassionate consideration of any novel undertakings.

Under the circumstances it is obviously the part of wise executive leadership to wind up the session as soon as possible and to postpone for later consideration all measures except those which are by general consent immediately imperative for the national welfare. At best there are a number of subjects, including submission of the nomination for the Supreme Court vacancy, which demand action at this session.

It is easy to understand why Mr. Roosevelt should now be insistent on pressing for the passage of all the major measures, still pending, which bear the stamp of Administration approval. The collapse of the court-packing proposal has made it seem the more necessary that the session be closed with something that can be capitalized as a political victory. Without this outcome, adjournment would seem at first glance further to endanger the President's prestige, which has admittedly received its first hard blow.

Such an attitude, however, would prove bad politics, even though it might appear to be good psychology. The need of the majority party, which is also the need of good government, is for a breathing spell to heal the wounds of a very bitter battle. That breathing spell would also afford opportunity for Administration leaders to review the whole legislative program in the light of returning prosperity and urgent governmental economy needs. There is a not unjustified feeling that some legislation, such as the hours-and-wages bill, is being urged not on its intrinsic merits but rather to offset the aftertaste of the court fight outcome.

Such pressure tactics would be a very dangerous tool for the Administration to employ at this juncture. Popularity lost over the Supreme Court issue is not to be regained by using the big stick in other directions. To do so, in the present mood of Congress, would be to risk turning a defeat into a legislative rout—and such an outcome is clearly not in the interests of the country as a whole.

President Roosevelt was very slow to realize that he was beaten, by a revolt within his own party, on the court issue. He failed to take advantage of numerous opportunities to withdraw gracefully and with full credit from his untenable position there. The situation with regard to indefinite continuation of the present session of Congress is analogous. If Mr. Roosevelt is wise he will co-operate with, and not impede, the rapidly increasing sentiment of the lawmakers in favor of a speedy adjournment.

Lo, The Wise Aztec!

The Mexican consul in Dallas has introduced an amusingly falsetto note into the mounting whine of the diplomatic wires. He has protested a scene in a Pan-American Exposition pageant in which an Aztec priest is depicted sacrificing a maiden. He declares only warriors were ever sacrificed by the Aztecs.

Several years ago Hollywood received a somewhat similar complaint objecting to the constant casting of Mexicans as villains. But while the movie colony was considerably embarrassed for a reply, Texas officials have the easy answer that Beauty is Truth, regardless of what the historians say. Explicity they have told the consul that no one would want to see a hairy warrior slung across a sacrificial stone, but a lovely girl clad only in a feather mantle packs 'em in.

The Ziegfeld tradition is clearly one of the points of superiority which American culture can claim over the Aztec. But close scrutiny of the exposition pageant will show where the Aztecs had it all over us. They dressed in feathers! We, in sweltering contrast, drape ourselves even in midsummer in drooping linens, cloying silks and scratching worsteds from which no amount of glib sales talk and breezy advertising can extract the heat. True, the fairer sex once toyed with the idea of feathers, but the experiment went no further than neck boas. After that, feathers went up instead of down with the result that today they are used only for headgear.

What a pity, for feather mantles are perhaps our greatest heritage from the Aztecs. Airsome, colorful and never needing a press, they would make the ideal summer garment. Perhaps they might even obviate further need for air conditioning, thus avoiding many a hot-weather snuffle. And certainly they would have given some sense to that line, so battered by the song writers, about feathering nests.

Six Mysterious Men.

The House reorganization committee wisely decided to divide the reorganization program into four bills instead of following the Senate's example by incorporating numerous unrelated proposals in a single omnibus measure.

The first of the House bills, authorizing the appointment of six administrative assistants to the President, has now been passed by that body. There remain for consideration bills relating to civil service reform, the General Accounting Office and that of the Comptroller General, and the general reorganization plan, giving the President large powers to consolidate and eliminate Government agencies.

The chief advantage of this seriatim method of procedure is that it permits the various parts of the program to be judged on the basis of merit, provided some logical order of selection is followed in reporting out the bills. Unfortunately the House appears to have put the cart before the horse in voting to create the six positions of administrative assistants before the fate of the reorganization program itself has been decided.

In recommending the appointment of these aides the Brownlow committee described their duties as that of contact men between the President and the various administrative agencies and departments. They "would remain in the background, issue no orders, make no decisions, emit no public statements," the committee explained. Furthermore, they "should be possessed of high competence, great physical vigor and a passion for anonymity."

This flying squadron of energetic lieutenants may be useful if Congress should approve the Administration's main plan calling for extensive reorganization and centralization of power in the hands of the Executive. Under existing conditions, however, there seems to be no crying need for these new aides.

Cabinet members and their assistants are the proper officials to make interdepartmental contacts and keep the President informed of what is going on. The work of dealing with the public, the press and the radio is done by the President's secretaries. The most likely avenue open to the anonymous executive agents leads, therefore, toward Capitol Hill.

Undue interference with the legislative program by personal agents of the President is a very real danger. And the imminence of that danger is emphasized by the President's strange conception of the relations existing between Congress and the Executive. In the famous letter written to Senator Barkley after the death of Senator Robinson, Mr. Roosevelt asserted that on Congress "falls the primary responsibility for the adoption of methods, but that on the President falls the responsibility of recommending objectives." The implication is that the Executive should originate the legislative program, and Congress limit itself to a choice of means to give effect to it.

If that un-American doctrine should take root, the President could undoubtedly keep a large number of assistants busy drafting bills, explaining their purpose to legislators and performing the work of an executive lobby. We have had more than enough of that kind of executive interference with legislative processes. There is no assurance that we shall not have more of it if Congress empowers the President to employ six $10,000 per year men to perform such duties as he may prescribe.

Surfeit Of Sibilance.

It looks like a field day for the letter "s" in the State of Georgia. The assumption that another Southerner started the fad by naming her heroine Scarlett is pure speculation. At any rate, the Rev. J. F. Cargile, of Macon, has almost finished a 13,000-word story in which each word begins with "s." A sample may serve to satisfy: "Spain's sapphire seas, surging sonorously, scared sickly sojourners." If read aloud, its sibilant syllables should certainly sound like a summer session of shrill cicadas.

Mr. Cargile's feat threatens to overshadow even that of Mr. Ernest Wright, of California, who maintains that authors can no longer see the words for the e's. He came to that conclusion upon being told that this letter appears five times oftener in print than any other. So he tied down that letter on his typewriter and wrote a 60,000-word book without once striking the key. No reviewer as yet has flown in the face of Mr. Wright's disdain for that letter by pronouncing his book "excellent."

No doubt both Mr. Cargile and Mr. Wright are perfectly sincere in their endeavors. But regardless of their success, or of what statisticians say, the letters "s" and "e" will never particularly affect belles-lettres one way or the other. In this day of subjective writing and autobiographies an author could do more for the reading public by plowing under an overproduction of the letter "I."

Twenty years ago there were considerably more train-auto wrecks than now. That was probably because the cars of that period were so noisy you couldn't hear a train until it climbed onto your runningboard.

We Americans are the wisest people in the world, we are. We dig gold out of the earth, declare it unconstitutional, and place it back in the earth.

Charges From Kansas.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: History repeats itself and the classic challenge of the Declaration of Independence in reference to misgovernment is quite as appropriate today as it was in the year 1776, the difference being that instead of presenting charges against King George, we present similar charges against our own Government at Washington. These may be stated, in part, as follows:

He has failed to investigate by use of the science of political economy the causes of the industrial depression, and to recommend to Congress the abolition of those causes. He has made it a crime for a citizen to have in his possession the gold coin of his country. He has caused the Government to repudiate its promise to pay its obligations in gold coin. He has fomented class hatred by frequent inveighing against "economic royalists" and "the predatory rich," while at the same time providing legislative acts which favor union labor to the disadvantage of employers.

At a time when numerous lawless strikes were causing the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars he has given labor leaders grounds for boasting that at least four departments of the Government were actively in sympathy with the strikers. He has wasted public revenue in socialistic experiments, to the extent that the national debt now exceeds the huge total of $36,000,000,000.

He has, so far as possible, arrogated to himself the powers of a dictator. He has, under the caption of social security, established a measure of paternalism better designated as socialistic insecurity, that will carry disastrous expense until it shall be repealed. He has been guilty of nepotism in providing one of his sons with a remunerative Federal position.

Crain Highway Accident.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent frightful tragedy, resulting in the deaths of seven persons, should bring to the realization of every driver of an automobile the danger in which he puts himself when he drives with blazing, illegal headlights. He can see perfectly, but the driver of the approaching car is so blinded that he can see nothing. I have driven three or four cars off the road because of the impossibility of seeing where I was going. The next driver may choose the alternative, crash into me and kill us both. Notice any stream of cars and four out of ten will have illegal lights, of which the police take no notice. Oh, yes, the cars were all inspected and all had dimmers, which, however, apparently are never used in response to my signal.

A wayside sign reading: "Use Only Legal Lights or Court Sudden Death" might be suggestive, until the police enforce the laws of both Maryland and the District.

Following The Court Bill's Defeat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Supreme Court bill having received its just and deserved death sentence, what is the next step? Why prolong a session of Congress weary and worn from a major battle and the heat of a Washington summer?

Congress is fully conversant with the pros and cons of the "ever normal granary" bill—knows it is just the "old Farm Board" bill, an acknowledged, complete failure now dressed up in Wallace-New Deal garments for disguise. Congress is familiar with the "wage and hour"—rightly named, Black—bill, a far-reaching "regimentation" plan and not new. It knows the "low-cost housing" bill, another notably misconceived and badly handled New Deal plan. Next, a Nation-wide system of TVA's—nothing more or less than absolute Government monopoly on a Nation-wide scale of the natural resources of the country.

Congress knows full well the meaning of all these New Deal laws, not written by the Nation's elected Congress, but the people generally do not.

Snap out of it, Congress! Go home and take your sorely needed and deserved rest. Go home and start a campaign to teach the people, the average American, the meaning of the proposed "Benny and Tommy" laws.

MARY CHALMERS HOOD.
Florence, Ala., July 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt, having lost his court pack decision by a technical knockout, in the armistice till the next fireside chat, warns of another '29 unless carte blanche on the old scale and special legislative privilege is restored to the infallible and exclusive wisdom of New Deal regimenters.

No clearer answer to charges voiced by Landon and other anti-New Deal campaign speakers could be devised than that which issues petulantly and spontaneously from the higher realms of the New Deal.

WALTER BAHNSEN.
Washington, July 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fight against the plan to "pack" the Supreme Court has been won, and that fine group of men in the Senate, also those in the House of Representatives who supported them, are entitled to all praise, respect and gratitude. So far as the writer is concerned, they not only are entitled to it but, what is more, they have it.

The court proposal, was utterly despicable in itself and in its application to the judicial system. It was also part and parcel of a dastardly plan which had as its aim a complete change in the structure of the Government by a process of subtle indirection plus a dishonest use of public funds and political intimidation, involving the ascendency of the executive branch (with special emphasis on the present Executive) and the descendency of the legislative and judicial branches.

A large group in Congress, backed up by a large group in the public, has given the President and those around him of similar mind to understand that nothing of that sort will be tolerated. All honor to them for having done so.

ARTHUR P. HOGAN.
Rye, N. Y., July 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At last the Supreme Court bill is settled. A sore that has been irking the tranquil minds of the whole Nation has been removed, whether or not by a few internes or by a group of regular practitioners is yet to be learned. What better time now to close and lock the door and let the weary Congress wend their way home so that they may soothe the pain that has constantly spread in the minds of their constituents?

The state of mind of any one's constituents is far more of an emergency than any bill that might come before this legislature. Why? Because, human endurance cannot equal the task of another defense of the Constitution which has so recently become smeared. Should we lay aside all selfishness we would awaken to the realization that the Constitution will always be in our midst, but we ourselves are but transients upon a changing bivouac of a jealous God. That the safety of this Constitution may ever be secure, then, let us adjourn for more refreshing environments.

The fact that a strong President, both mentally and physically, has courted the favor of the majority of our people does not dispose of the contentions that society progresses not upon their will, but after the fashion of the more conservative. Some may fall by the wayside, but the Constitution must live on.

Ezekiel On Federal Unions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reference is made to the article which appeared in The Post under date of July 22 under the heading "Ezekiel Tells Federal Unions Not to Cry 'Wolf' at U. S. Doors."

The writer happened to be present at the open meeting sponsored by U. F. W. A., Local No. 2, Agriculture Lodge, at which Mordecai Ezekiel spoke, and feels that the article in question presented only one side of Dr. Ezekiel's views on the subject.

Dr. Ezekiel traced the history of labor unions, showing that the necessity for self-protection caused workers to form trade unions. He went on to show the many beneficial things which unions can accomplish, both for their members and for their industry. Coming down to the question of Government unions, he stated that many of the same factors applied but pointed out essential differences in the make-up of trade unions and Government unions. It was in this connection that he made his remarks as to how Government unions should take up complaints and grievances.

But to construe Dr. Ezekiel's entire speech as a warning to Government unions, and to the Agriculture union in particular, against constantly worrying the Administration with individual grievances, is a slight exaggeration of fact. As it happens, the case which Agriculture Lodge is at present taking up with the Administration is the first individual grievance it has presented to the higher officials in the department.

By selecting merely two or three paragraphs from Dr. Ezekiel's speech and high-lighting these, the writer feels that an erroneous impression might be gained by those who did not hear the speech and its entire liberal tone misinterpreted as an anti-union sentiment on the part of the Department of Agriculture officials.

What's In A Sign?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Under Supervision of U. S. Treasury." The writer has observed this statement in gold letters on the windows of numerous bank institutions in the city, notably the Fidelity Building and Loan Association, and has endeavored, without success, to ascertain its true meaning. The business man's dictionary which I have defines supervision as the act of overseeing. It defines the verb oversee as meaning to superintend and then it defines superintend as meaning to direct. Judging by what has happened to the Fidelity organization, the U. S. Treasury has a different definition for supervision. There does not appear to have been much, if any, direction.

Some years ago in New York there was a Bank of the United States. The impression was created and proven during trial later that the bank had the backing of the United States. Hundreds were lead to believe the bank to be sound because of its name, but this cheap ruse coupled with questionable banking practices finally brought a smash and some of the ring-leaders in this racket went up the river to visit Warden Lawes.

Here in Washington, persons were lead to deposit their savings in the Fidelity because of the assurance given by the words "Under Supervision of U. S. Treasury."

It is perhaps asking too much of Mr. Morgenthau that he explain what is meant by "Under Supervision of U. S. Treasury." He is rather busy, having his picture taken with Shirley Temple and others, but won't you please try to find out what the saying means? Hundreds of people who have been hard hit by the closing of the Fidelity would like to know whether it is just another cruel joke and also whether they can really hope to ever get their money back.

A CURIOUS DEPOSITOR.

The Post Impressionist

Two Pictures and a Poem.

WHEN I was in the first grade in school, back in Forestville, N. Y., I suppose I acquired a great many things that have passed into the nebulous fabric of my mind—if we may define "mind" as the sum total of a person's experiences from birth to death. But if you should ask me what I learned in the first grade, I would say: "I learned two pictures and a poem." The rest is inseparable impression and the rote of learning to read, write and figure.

* * *

One of the pictures hung on the wall at my right not far from my desk. It was a good-sized, brown-toned reproduction of "The Helping Hand" by Renouf, in a plain, brown, wooden frame. I suppose at some time or other we studied it in class, but I don't remember that. I do remember how I used to sit and look at it; and now, I think, of all the paintings I have ever seen I like it the best—not because of its consummate art but because there is a photographic image of it somewhere in my brain that has never faded. When I saw the original of this painting for the first time in the Corcoran Gallery of Art, there was no ripple went down my spine: I was a little disappointed, for the frame was wrong, the picture was too big, and somehow there was some "celestial light" missing.

The other picture I learned was called "Feeding Her Birds." It was painted by Millet, I think, and my teacher gave me a small print of it for excellence in handwriting—the first and only prize I ever won in the field of chirography. It is a picture of a woman feeding from a big spoon three children sitting in a doorway, and it is the second greatest picture in the world, so far as I am concerned. I don't know what became of the print, but I don't need it now. I have it in another place. Some day I may see the original, but I know I won't like it.

As for the poem—it was by H. C. Bunner. The other day, for 39 cents, I bought a copy of his poem, published 40 years ago. Sure enough—there it was—"One, Two, Three!" It is a poem about "an old, old, old, old lady and a boy that was half-past three . . . with a thin little twisted knee" and about the strange way they played hide-and-go-seek together.

Henry Cuyler Bunner, if he had lived until August 3 this year, would be 82 years old, but actually he lived to be exactly half of that age. For nearly 20 years he was editor of the comic American journal "Puck." He wrote stories and plays as well as verse, of which Brander Matthews said: "It has the form, the finish, the flavor of scholarship that the cultivated recognize and relish; and it also has the freshness, the spontaneity, the heartiness and the human sympathy, wanting which no poetry has ever been welcome outside the narrow circle of the dilettanti."

Bunner wrote all kinds of poems, light and serious, on many subjects. There are, for example, his clever "Home, Sweet Home, with Variations" in which he parodies in the manner of Swinburne, Bret Harte, Austin Dobson, Oliver Goldsmith, Pope, and Walt Whitman; the humorous "Behold the Deeds!" (being the plaint of Adolphe Culpepper Ferguson, Salesman of Fancy Notions, Held in Durance of his Landlady for a "failure to connect" on a Saturday night); also love poems, vers de societe, elegies, and poems on such personages as Gen. Sherman, Leopold Damrosch, Wilhelm I, Longfellow. Some of them mean little to us today. But the best one in the bunch is the one he wrote for me, entitled "One, Two, Three!"—about an old, old, old, old lady and a boy that was half-past three!

* * *

I read it aloud to my two boys, ages 7 and 9, but they seemed little impressed. Perhaps it seemed odd that I should be saying out loud such lines as—

The boy would bend his face down
On his one little sound right knee,
And he'd guess where she was hiding,
In guesses One, Two, Three!

The psychologist probably has his modern theories about the impressionability of the child mind. But Charles Lamb, who, I note, died just 100 years ago, had a few thoughts on that subject. At the age of 6 or 7 he saw his first plays. He was too young to understand their import, but "I was awe-struck," he says. "It was all enchantment and a dream." It was six or seven years later before he saw another play, but his first experience was still ringing in his ears. "I expected the same feelings to come again with the same occasion. In that interval what had I not lost! At the first period I knew nothing, understood nothing, discriminated nothing. I felt all, loved all, wondered all—'was nourished, I could not tell how'—I had left the temple a devotee, and was returned a rationalist."

Even so, we have ever a yearning to recapture the old experience, the old delight, whether it be a poem, a picture, a face, or a fancy. But we can never quite do it: the things which we have seen we now can see no more. "Memory," writes the New England poet, John Holmes—

Memory is a quiet thing
Lipping at the edge of mind,
Nor even murmuring
Of all the sea behind.

And that is something to think about. PAUL H. OEHSER.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Enemies Of Democracy.

IT WOULD SIMPLIFY matters in our resistance to that formless and somewhat exaggerated menace known to the trade as subversive alien influences if we should consolidate those two influences—communism and fascism—and treat them as one and the same thing. In practical effect they are the same.

Nazism, of course, is merely a German imitation of fascism, with certain special features suited to the spiritual peculiarities of the Germans. Hitler copied Mussolini's blackhand method of organization, which Mussolini borrowed from the Sicilian terrorists, and the Nazi salute is exactly the same as the Italian gesture, except that the Germans are rather shamefaced about it and have reduced it to a perfunctory flip of the hand. The Germans, furthermore, are required by law to say, "Heil Hitler!" in giving the salute, but they obviously feel foolish in this, so the password, like the high sign, has been abbreviated and is now pronounced "Hiddler"—usually under the breath.

* * * *

THE NAZIS differ from the Fascists in one important respect, and this difference makes them almost identical with the Communists, whom they affect to detest. The Fascists protect the Christian religion as a matter of practical politics, but the Nazis are anti-Christian and, in spots, aggressively pagan. They feel that Christianity provides a common tie with other peoples whom they may be required to kill, so to prevent fraternalism from extending beyond their borders they have tried two methods. The first, appealing to the majority of the people, holds that Jesus Christ had a special affection for that geographical area known as Germany and a hatred for all human beings residing outside that zone.

The other, propagated by old Gen. Ludendorff and Adolf Hitler's special bodyguard known as the Black Corps, insists that Christianity is nonsense and that there are special gods, local to the country, who are much better, because, being entirely German and unchristian, they will not be accepted by any other race. Thus there would be no common religious tie with the enemy in time of war, and it would be a religious duty of the pagan Nazis to kill all infidels, whether Christians, atheists, Mohammedans or Jews.

The Fascists, however, demand certain services or certain acquiescences amounting to the same thing in return for protection of the Christian religion. Christianity in Italy is compelled to serve a political system which is repugnant to the Christians of the free countries and a constant menace to their peace and their lives. So Christianity's freedom under fascism is only nominal and is purchased at a high price.

The Russian Communists have no god, unless it be the mummy of Lenin, and they suppress all religious tendencies.

There are apparent differences between the subversive influences. True, the Fascists pretend to keep hands off the family and the home, but little boys are taken into military training at the age of 6, and the education of the young constantly points them in the direction of war. And any father, mother or clergyman who tells a child that it was wrong and not God's will that Italians go a-killing in Abyssinia or Spain, where certainly Italy was looking for trouble and not the offended party, had better bar the door. The Italian teaching of children strives to imbue the kids with the desire to shoot people, and the motto of Italian youth, lettered on their neckerchiefs and on the hilts of their toy daggers, is not 'We Play Fair" or "Do One Good Deed Every Day" but "We Shoot Straight."

* * * *

BUT SO FAR as government and human rights and property rights are concerned, communism, fascism and Nazism are all alike and all enemies of the American ideal of democracy. Hitler does business and enjoys great prestige with his people as the arch-enemy of communism, but if he and Mussolini were to get together with Stalin, of Russia, in an honest meeting they would find that they have no quarrel at all. They all believe in the same things and use the same methods. Mussolini is no more religious than Hitler or Stalin, was not married until late in life, and married then only for political reasons.

Communism, fascism and Nazism forbid freedom of thought, speech and the press. They forbid labor to organize; they have no parliament; they do not permit the people to vote; they suppress opposition in thought, word and deed by execution or exile, and private property does not exist. Mussolini and Hitler started out to suppress communism, but each suppressive measure that they adopted was taken from the enemy, and they have only succeeded in imitating the common foe. Now they are all the common enemy of democracy, all alike, and divided only by rivalries.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Yacht War Impends

The war between the Vanderbilts and the Sopwiths will be renewed this week. Both families are reported in the pink while definitely not in the red.

* * * *

The sixteenth battle for the America's cup starts off Newport Saturday, money permitting, between the two yachts, Ranger and Endeavour II. Neither is incorporated, so there will be no open-boat pursuit by Mr. Morgenthau.

* * * *

There will be one race each week-end, the cup to go to the winner of four out of seven arguments.

* * * *

America's boat, the Ranger, wil be sailed by Harold S. Vanderbilt, the country's Number One Opponent of Artificial Sun Tans. The British entry, Endeavour II, will be sailed by T. O. M. Sopwith, who never has to show up at the office much, either.

* * * *

The races will be over a triangular course of 30 miles, but the spectators will go around in circles in accordance with tradition, asking such questions as "Which is the French launch?" "What happens in case of a draw?" and "Are there any scratches?"

* * * *

Each side of the triangle is called a leg. This is to give the match just enough sex interest to hold the attention of the average mind.

* * * *

It will cost a million dollars to run the races, but it will prove that quite as much can be accomplished in squandering money under private initiative as under government auspices in a Democratic regime.

* * * *

The mainsail of each boat is so huge it would make a sheet big enough to cover all the beds between a spot a half mile north of Perth Amboy, N. J., and the traffic booth in Cos Cob, Conn., or more than enough to make a nightgown for Paul Whiteman.

* * * *

Yes, Genoa jibs will play a great part in the international crisis as usual. You remember those Genoa jib controversies back in 1934, don't you? Vanderbilt was supposed to buy 'em at a department store or something and Sopwith charged him with getting them through a mail-order house.

* * * *

The details escape us, but war was averted by eliminating jibs completely and substituting luffs. No Genoa luffs, understand; just plain luffs.

* * * *

Vanderbilt ready? Sopwith ready? Go!
And will the spectators please cease yawning?

"Down on the Farm."

The roadside sign reads "Please Buy Here—
"Fresh Fruit and Corn Just Grown by Me;"
To city folks it is not clear—

Signs Of Weakness Detected In N. R. P. Ranks; Cardenas Executes Three New Policies; Many Hats In Ring For 1940.

By Jeffrey Paul.

Special Correspondent of The Post.

Mexico, D. F.

MEXICO'S most notable contribution to the headlines of the world press in the past two months have been in the fields of politics and economics. On July 4, the well-oiled machine of the National Revolutionary Party, allied with the Confederation of Mexican Workers, sent 173 candidates into the Chamber of Deputies. The few independents who oppsed the machine were swept aside in ruthless fashion and there is no doubt that the new parliamentary body, which will contain more than 60 men representative of Leftist elements, will be even more radical than the one that just preceded it.

Yet, dangerous weak spots in the all-powerful N. R. P. were brought to light before, during and after the elections. Rebellion within its own ranks has not yet been suffocated, and the defeated independents have not hesitated to cry "fraud" in the face of returns which in some instances saw an independent "outvoted" by 12,000 ballots to 150. Moreover, Senator Ezequiel Padilla, one-time paladin of the Calles forces, rose in the chamber to accuse the "so-called labor leader friends of the President" of conducting him toward disaster, "betraying the trust he had placed in them." The next day the Senate hurled all sorts of charges at Padilla, but observers agree that a very preceptible division has become apparent in the relations between President Cardenas and the forces of labor.

Oil Strike Provided First Hint of Strife.

THE FIRST open break came during the oil strike of last month. Shortly after the workers deserted their posts, Cardenas appealed to labor and industry to patch up the quarrel as quickly as possible, so that the economic interests of the nation would not suffer irreparable losses. But the workers refused to accept the companies' counterproject to their demands and after almost two weeks of nation-wide losses in all lines of business, the President was forced to call a meeting which resulted in the strike's end.

According to the announcement made at the time, an investigation was to be made into the ability of the oil companies to pay what the workers demanded. In reality, work was resumed with the employers in the same position they occupied when the strike started; and Lombardo Toledano, who in some mysterious fashion had emerged as the director of the oil strike, lost prestige as a result of the C. T. M.'s retreat. Although no behind-the-scene reports have come out, it seems that Cardenas wanted the laborers to accept the counter-project of the companies. When this was refused, he had to act to save the country from the creeping industrial paralysis which lack of fuel was bringing on.

Thus, the stage was set when the President attempted to intervene in a textile dispute which has caused heavy losses to that section of Veracruz located near Orizaba. In the small, industrialized town of Cocolapan, the Confederation of Mexican Workers, directed by Toledano, and the regional Confederation of Mexican Workers, headed by Morones, were disrupting the right of their respective members to hold all the jobs in the local textile factories. Dispute led to bloodshed and in May, the President was forced to lay down the bases for an agreement.

Laborers Ignored Presidential Plan.

WEEK AFTER WEEK went by and the presidential suggestions were ignored. Factory owners of Cocolapan implored executive aid once again. Laborers were disarmed and the two fighting unions were advised to adjust their differences. Lombardo's C. T. M. turned around and requested a supreme court injunction assuring them of their local rights in disregard of the presidential suggestions. This was interpreted as a slap at Cardenas, and although the C. T. M. leaders tried to explain away their actions by asserting that "it is labor's right to disagree with presidential suggestions if it so wishes," this was the first time that the "labor twins," Cardenas and Toledano, had openly gone different roads on a labor question.

At the very time that the deputy elections and the Cocolapan case were holding the attention of the public, the Cardenas government took, in quick succession, three bold steps. The first was the decree which nationalized the National Railways of Mexico, the second was the proposed law on farm co-operatives, the third dealt with a project to extend the civil service laws to all governmental departments and, most interesting of all, to allow government employes the right to strike.

The nationalization of the railroads found its first and strongest opposition from the railway employes themselves. Up until the expedition of the confiscatory decree, they had formed one of the strongest unions in the country. Now they were to be deprived of the right to strike, and they did not like it. Evidently, some inkling of the President's civil service reform act was passed on to them and their protests quieted down.

The more conservative sections of public opinion favored the presidential bill as conducive to regaining the national rights which Mexico lost during the "foreign invasion of natural resources" which occurred during the Diaz regime. Two important questions were asked, however. One was: How are the bondholders to be paid? The other: If the railways have not paid dividends for many years, where will the government find funds to cover the losses which must be expected for several years more? To date, the questions go unanswered.

Farm Co-operative Law Follows Agrarian Program.

THE LAW on farm co-operatives was the logical outcome of the government's agrarian program. Several months ago, The Post carried an account of Attorney Luis Cabrera's predictions regarding the problems which were certain to develop if the government continued to make its agrarian banks the center around which farm policy should revolve. The peons who thought they were free from the servitude of hacienda days now have a new overlord, the Agrarian Bank, which tells them when to sow and reap, when to sell, and how much to charge for their products. Call it a "collectivization policy" if you will; Cabrera named it socialism, which one day will verge into communism.

Civil service reform was, of course, long overdue. For years the government had been in the hypocritical position of enforcing advanced labor laws while neglecting the most essential rights of its own employes. Many were paid less than the minimum wage; thousands were thrown out of jobs with changing administrations or merely when departments came under new directors; the right to strike was not conceded.

On July 11, thousands of government workers, in Mexico City and throughout the country, paraded in thanksgiving for the attitude expressed by the President in his civil service proposals. While the right to strike is limited by certain conditions which need not be explained here, the employes are already flocking into newly formed syndicates. And in this very right to strike lies a danger for the National Revolutionary Party, a danger so great that it may put the finishing touches of destruction on the mighty political machine which has never lost an "election."

Here is the reason. As is well known, the great bulk of party funds is drawn from the discounts made on the check of every Government employe. Time and again the workers have protested, and even Cardenas, who is conceded to be a genuine friend of all laboring groups, took no action to stop such illegal discounts. With the right to strike in their hands, it is very probable that the government employes will try out the new-found weapon by striking against the payment of "dues" to a political group whose leaders live in palaces and drive expensive motor cars, drawn from "salaries" which are paid by government workers.

Presidential Aspirants Plan For Elections of 1940.

PRESIDENTIAL aspirants have alreday begun their maneuvers. The constitution says that President Cardenas cannot succeed himself; he has declared his unwillingness to break the law. So Gen. Cedillo, secretary of agriculture, has ambitions; so have Gen. Mugica, secretary of communications; Vasquez Vela, secretary of education; Lombardo Toledano, head of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, and many others.

There will be time enough to predict the 1940 President when 1939 rolls around. But it would be a good idea to remember that the law of the land forbade the re-election of Santa Anna; he changed it. So did Benito Juarez, Porfirio Diaz, and Alvaro Obregon.

Peiping

By Barnet Nover

The Recurrent Theme.

THE JAPANESE troops now hammering at the gates of Peiping are writing no new page in the long annals of that glamorous city. They are only the latest in a long line of invaders.

In the many centuries that have elapsed since its foundation, Peiping has undergone many mutations. It has had its period of glory and of abasement, of greatness and of decline; its eras of peace and tranquillity and of war, chaos and confusion. But always the leitmotif in its history as in the history of China itself has been the recurrent invasions.

"What a magnificent city to loot," said Bluecher when he gazed at the Paris of 1815. And more than one conquering general has felt the same way about Peiping. More than one, in fact, has not stopped merely with wishing but has obeyed the impulse.

Yet, also, no small number of those who have conquered the city have, in turn, been conquered by its charm and beauty and thus became builders rather than destroyers.

So was it in the days of Kublai Khan. So was it again after the Manchus had made themselves masters of the Middle Kingdom as the Chinese, with pardonable pride, called their great land.

* * * *

PEIPING WAS already old when Kublai made it the center of an empire which extended from the Black Sea to the Pacific.

In those 17 centuries prior to his reign, it had been the capital of the semi-mythical Yen state, in the days of the Chou Dynasty. It had been destroyed by Hsi Huang-ti, the earliest of China's nation makers who, though he ruled for only a brief period, left an ineradicable impress on Chinese history. For henceforth the concept of China as a unit, a concept again playing a part in the Far East, became an element in Chinese civilization which not even centuries of confusion have been able to destroy.

Not always in those earlier days was Peiping ruled by Chinese. The contrary was more often the case. Close to the northern limits of the Chinese realm, it was always being inundated by an influx of the barbarians from beyond the Great Wall which never wholly kept them out.

For two centuries after the overthrow of the Han Dynasty in 220 A. D. it was under Tartar control. Later it fell into the hands of the Khitans from whose name medieval Europe got the name for China—Cathay. Still later it was conquered by the Golden Horde who had swooped down on North China from what is now Eastern Siberia. And then, early in the 13th century, the Mongols came.

* * * *

TARTARS, Khitans, Golden Horde, Mongols—who these people were, where they originated, what differences there were between them racially, no one precisely knows. But so far as the Chinese were concerned they were all barbarians, lured from the barren north by the riches of the Middle Kingdom. And all of them in turn, having conquered were conquered. China has absorbed all its invaders.

In many respects it was Kublai Khan who can be credited with being the founder of modern Peiping although little is left of his great work and that little, like the Marco Polo bridge, is now in danger of destruction.

From Kublai's reign dates the period of Peiping's real greatness. He rebuilt it on an impressive scale and there can be no question that in that day and age it was the most magnificent city in the world.

At least that is what young Marco Polo thought when his lively Venetian eyes first feasted on the wonders of Cambaluc, as Peiping was then called. And that is what he still thought when, many years later, he returned to his native land to tell his story to incredulous ears.

* * * *

"THE MULTITUDE of inhabitants," wrote Marco Polo, "and the number of houses in the city of Cambaluc . . . is greater than the mind can comprehend . . . To this city everything that is more rare and valuable in all parts of the world finds its way; and more especially does this apply to India, which furnishes precious stones, pearls and various drugs and spices.

"From the provinces of Cathay itself, as well as from the other provinces of the Empire, whatever there is of value is brought here, to supply the demands of those multitudes who are induced to established their residence in the vicinity of the court, the quantity of merchandise sold exceeds also the traffic of any other place; for no fewer than a thousand carriages and pack-horses, loaded with raw silk, make their daily entry; and gold tissues and silks of various kinds are manufactured to an immense extent."

But the Mongols vanished as other conquerers before them had vanished. In 1368 a Chinese of humble origin and great military ability overthrow the effete Yuan (Mongol) Dynasty and became the founder of a new, Chinese, dynasty, the Ming.

* * * *

CHINA HAS HAD many capitals in its long history. Nanking was one of them. It was at Nanking where the Mings established their government and Peiping, as so often in its history, became a city of faded glories. But in the 15th century it again came into its own. The Mings made it their capital and gave it the name of Peking. It had been known successively as Yuchow, Nanching, Yenching, Cambaluc and Peiping-fu. Now it is again Peiping.

After the Mings, the Manchus. A new wave of invaders swept down from the north and subjugated China. And they, too, fell victims to the allure of Chinese civilization. Under the Manchus, Peiping thrived.

But the endless story of strong rulers succeeded by weak; of glory followed by decay, was repeated in the case of the Manchus as of the dynasties before them. And it was in this period that Peiping, which had so frequently experienced invasion from the north and south, first experienced invasion from the west.

The Occident had been pounding on China's doors for some time. These doors had been locked and bolted. But the locks and bolts proved feeble as against the destructive weapons of the West. In the late '50s of the 19th century an international army made its way from Tientsin to Peiping and when they got there showed their superior civilization by destroying much of the beauty in the old city.

It was the first, but not the last of such invasions. There was a recurrence at the turn of the century, at the time of the Boxers. And now it is the turn of the westerners of the Orient, the Japanese, to follow the historic path. But the history of Peiping is not yet over.

Oliver Cromwell

By William Lyon Phelps.

Of the rulers of England from William the Conqueror in 1066 to George VI in 1937, none was a greater genius than plain Mr. Cromwell.

During the eighteenth century he was commonly regarded as a sanctimonious hypocrite, who used the mask of religion to control the Puritan forces in the army and in Parliament; but in 1845 Carlyle published Cromwell's Letters and Speeches, with Elucidations, remarking in a letter himself, "What if the mask should turn out to be no mask at all, but the man's true face?"

* * * *

Well, a highly important contribution to the subject has just appeared, written by Prof. Wilbur Cortez Abbott, of Harvard, and published by the Harvard University Press.

This is a big tome (too heavy, of course) of 759 pages, and is only the first volume; three more are to follow; so that this biography looks like the master work of Prof. Abbott's career, and should also be, so far as such works can be, definite. I suppose that this is as close as we, living 300 years later, can get to one of the most powerful and one of the most bewildering personalities in history.

The title is "The Writings and Speeches of Oliver Cromwell;" Prof. Abbott gives credit on the title page, "With the Assistance of Catherine D. Crane." In 1929 Prof. Abbott had published a bibliography of Cromwell. He has, of course, used the collections of documents made by Carlyle and in the twentieth century by Mrs. Lomas, and has added over 700.

* * * *

The chief value here is that out of these materials the readers of today may make up their own minds, with the assurance that they have a better basis for judgment than has ever before been possible. Incidentally, the book is not dull; those were exciting times. Oliver has always seemed to me remarkable for being one of the few great military geniuses without personal charm; Alexander, Hannibal, Caesar, Napoleon, all had extraordinary magnetic charm. Yet this lack of charm in some ways actually adds to the interest with which we follow his career.

Both sides in that great Civil War—the Cavaliers and the Roundheads—have inspired singing poems. Scott's Here's a Health to King Charles and Browning's Cavalier Tunes, while Oliver has his laureate in Lord Macaulay's Battle of Naseby.

Broader Attack On Paralysis Is Roosevelt Aim

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt has taken steps to expand the Nation-wide program of infantile paralysis prevention and immunization.

The President's Birthday Ball commission for infantile paralysis research said yesterday that trustees of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation already were working on the enlargement program.

Mr. Roosevelt, a sufferer from infantile paralysis for more than 15 years, praised the agency's work and said the prevention battle must go forward on all fronts.

Money Given Scientists.

He made the comment on the commission's final report of the 1935 ball, which showed $241,000 had been granted for paralysis research to 15 colleges, universities and other organizations.

This represented 30 per cent of the total funds raised. The remaining 70 per cent is turned over to local communities to assist paralysis victims.

New York University received the largest grant, $64,000. Others were Stanford University, $30,000; University of Southern California, $25,000; Long Island College of Medicine, $20,000; Harvard University, $17,800; Johns Hopkins University, $15,000; University of Pennsylvania, $12,500; University of Chicago, $11,000; Health Research, Inc., University of California, and Yale University, $10,000 each; University of Wisconsin, $6,600; Columbia University, $5,000; Western Reserve University, $2,100, and University of Michigan, $2,000.

Hopes to Rout Disease.

Henry L. Doherty, chairman of the commission, said it does not attempt to appraise the practical values of the research.

"These," he said, "are matters with which the medical profession must deal. Those in whose hands the money was placed are men of the highest scientific attainment, all with a keen determination to find in the end the solution of this problem which has so long challenged medical science.

"That men like these still keep on in this spirit gives us our hope that infantile paralysis, like other diseases, may in the end be conquered."

Green Misquoted Him, Writer Says

By the Associated Press.

Paul Y. Anderson, newspaperman, declared yesterday that William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, misquoted him in a statement about the American Newspaper Guild's convention.

Green said: "As Paul Y. Anderson, no friend of mine, so wittily put it 'the convention did not indorse murder, highway robbery or arson.'"

Anderson said he made no such statement or implication, but that he did remark that, "if it was to be the guild's policy to indorse every worthy object and condemn every objectionable one, the convention might also have gone on record in favor of health, happiness and requiring fathers to bear their fair share of the children, and in opposition to sin, sunburn, halitosis and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor."

D. C. Vote Is Topic Of Meeting Tonight

William A. Roberts, former People's Counsel and president of the Monday Evening Club, will speak in the Sylvan Theater, on suffrage for the District, at 8:30 tonight.

Representative Reuben T. Wood, of Missouri and Charles Franklin, delegate of the Conduit Road Citizens Association, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, also will speak.

Representative Henry G. Teigan, of Minnesota, will precede. The Citizens Committee for progressive action sponsored the meeting.

By the Associated Press.

Uncle Sam offered yesterday to pay dividends on some young men's hobby of building airplanes.

The Civil Service Commission announced open competitive examinations to be held August 3 for junior aircraft modelmakers and under aircraft modelmakers, for assignment to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics at its Langley Field, Va., laboratories.

Examinations will be held at points in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia.

British Marines Rule Barbados Riot Scene

Bridgetown, Barbados, July 28 (AP).—The British cruiser Apollo landed marines here today to enforce order after many hours of rioting had taken at least six lives and injured 21 persons.

Police said there was one brief flare-up after the marines landed, but that the city was "quiet now." The disturbance started after authorities ordered the expulsion of Clement Payne, a resident of Trinidad, who had been acquitted of a charge of making false statements to an emigration officer.

Robert A. Taft to Seek Senate Nomination

Cincinnati, July 28 (AP).—Robert A. Taft, bitter foe of the New Deal, declared informally today his intention of seeking the Republican nomination for the United States Senate.

Taft, elder son of the late President and former Chief Justice of the United States, made his statement in letters to newspaper editors of Ohio and to his former colleagues in the Ohio Legislature.

Roosevelt's Work Praised by Farley

Salem, Ill., July 28 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley asserted today the depression was wiped out by the present Administration.

Attending with him the first big Illinois gathering of the party prior to the Senatorial election next year were high Democratic officials of the State, headed by Gov. Henry Horner.

Farley's prepared address made no mention of Illinois politics.

"I believe the country thinks it is lucky to have had such a President develop in the period of emergency," said Farley, "and that when the time comes he will go out of office as popular as he entered office, which means that no President will fare better at the hands of the historians of the future than Franklin D. Roosevelt."

THE FOURTH OF EIGHT REASONS WHY . . .

The Washington Post Grows

THE SPEED of a newspaper's growth is dependent upon its ability to know what its readers want and to give those readers the best of everything that must go into the production of an outstanding publication. Almost every one knows that THE WASHINGTON POST has doubled its circulation in less than four years. This was no accident. The reasons why are interesting. And the purpose of this series of chats with readers is simply to tell how it was done.

NO. 4—SPECIAL ARTICLES

WHEN JEREMY GRIDLEY developed the "Hell-Fire Club" as a group of contributors to James Franklin's "New England Courant" in the middle 1700's, there appeared in an American newspaper, probably for the first time, series of special articles dealing with local, national or international matters of a more or less controversial nature. One such series in the "Courant" crusaded vehemently against efforts to promote "Inoculating or Transplanting the Small-Pox." Not always motivated by a full knowledge of the facts, these early articles were, nevertheless, the beginnings of what has subsequently become an important newspaper function: the publication of carefully prepared facts on subjects of importance, interest and entertainment. Perhaps the most famous series of investigative articles printed by an American newspaper was that which appeared in the New York World in 1905 and which, according to D. C. Seitz, biographer of Joseph Pulitzer, "succeeded in unmasking insurance corruption . . and, incidentally, started Charles E. Hughes upon an exalted public career." All such series do not, of course, have such results . . . nor, are such results necessarily intended. Their purpose may range all the way from the presentation of facts for pure amusement on the part of the reader, to add to his or her fund of information on a variety of subjects, to right a wrong in the public good.

THE WASHINGTON POST, as the occasion arises, presents to its readers specially prepared series of articles comprehensively dealing with timely topics of the day on subjects of local, national and international importance.

His series recounted adventures in search of the D. C. boundary line.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Young Wife Agonized Because Flirtatious Secretary Pursues Husband and Copies Her Coiffure, Dress.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am miserable about something that has been going on for months and it is not in my imagination. Apparently I have no control over the situation and sorely need sound advice. I am a good looking young married woman, as much in love with my husband as could be possible. I trust him completely, knowing that he loves me. We meet every day right after work and play games, go calling, or else home to play with our darling little baby.

* * * *

Here is the thorn in our happiness: Since we were married he went to work in an office where there is a secretary as nice looking as I am, who is determined to capture his affections herself and who obviously flirts with him, but in such a way that the employers cannot tell. Whenever I happen to drop in to see him about something when downtown, I find her sitting in his room (if the bosses are out). If I ask him about it, he says: "Why shouldn't she come and be friendly when neither of us have work to do?"

* * * *

The other day she didn't know I was there when she came in, and was so busy giving him a long look which seemed to say: "Isn't it awful that you're married and I'm crazy about you and can't do anything about it?" that she didn't even see me. She jumped when I greeted her across the room. She has copied the way I dress, even going so far as dyeing her hair the color of mine (which is natural) and dressing it as nearly like mine as possible.

* * * *

My husband says he doesn't care who works there and that his hands are tied so far as getting her transferred elsewhere is concerned. As he says, her employers don't see anything wrong and would think him a fool if he suggested she was pursuing him. I don't want him to give up his wonderful job as he has a good chance in the firm and is very well thought of. Just the same, day after day I agonize knowing what the creature is trying to do.

* * * *

Will this long daily contact make him take an interest in her and lose interest in me? Should I just sit back and take it without a word, not knowing what the outcome will be? Please answer soon.

DESPERATE.

Little Cause for Alarm.

DEAR DESPERATE: What your fear of the girl amounts to is fear of the unknown. It is my opinion that if you got to know her really well, your apprehensions concerning the supposed damage she might do to your marriage would automatically evaporate into thin air. The worst thing you can do, so far as your happiness is concerned, is to give way to this fear to the extent of brooding over her siren's possibilities, so to speak; and to the extent of keeping her image ever before your husband's mind through discussing with him her predatory aims and tactics.

* * * *

I think you can well afford to be amused and reassured by her efforts to look like you. For one thing, imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, and for another thing, her efforts plainly tell that she knows who holds your husband's love. Also, the fact that she is so indeterminate a personality in herself that she needs must copy another in order to achieve presumable distinction rather cancels her as a potentially dangerous rival. The rival a woman has need to fear, in my opinion, is one who has elusive, unfathomable charms of mind, manner and appearance which she herself does not possess; also, the rival who is clever enough to engender masculine pursuit, rather than become the pursuer herself.

* * * *

So long as you maintain, without overt striving, your present thorough-going comradeship with your husband, you have nothing to fear from any other woman, this man-hunting secretary included. As his wife, his sweetheart, the mother of his child and his leisure-hour playmate, you have immeasurable opportunity for creating a mutual bond of love so deep, so strong, so indispensable to him, that no woman on earth could come between you. The most dangerous thing you have done so far is to imply, through your nagging criticism of the girl's conduct, that there is a remote possibility that your husband could ever find with another woman anything you cannot better provide.

* * * *

Be on guard, yes. But never let your husband know that you are on guard; that any shadow of jealous concern ever crosses your mind. Don't let anything the girl may do, or anything she may inveigle or betray your husband into doing which savors of flirtatiousness or spiritual disloyalty on his part, cause you to turn from him even for an instant, in coldness, dismay or reproach. Her only possible hope of achieving her despicable objective is through rousing your jealousy to the point where it affects your love relationship with your husband.

* * * *

Console yourself with the thought that your present anxiety is not unique. It has been borne by virtually every young wife and mother who deeply and tenderly loved her husband and the father of her child. There is always another woman on the horizon to represent that "little cloud . . . like a man's hand." When it isn't a secretary it is a family friend, or a discontented wife in one's social group, or a widow or a divorcee. The way to meet the challenge is not to worry, brooding and nagging; but by exerting one's self to the utmost to become every day, in every way, more radiantly charming, more beguiling and more companionable to the husband one hopes to keep. Incidentally, a little mystery of personality is a very magnetic thing in a wife. So don't let your husband know your every thought—and particularly not those you are currently thinking about the pestiferous secretary. M. H.

Tomorrow's Problem.

At the end of his rope in dealing with hysterical, melancholy, threatening, nagging, suspicious wife who is now "passing through that difficult transition which all women experience in middle life," nerve-wracked husband asks for help in convincing her of the "virtue and necessity of self control." He will be advised here tomorrow. This column appears daily and Sunday.

Town and Country Shoe Wardrobe for Men

For country and sportswear, the lower row of shoes suggests smart wing-tip brogue (left), with heavy crepe rubber sole and heel, and (right) the shoe patterned after a ski boot, with either rubber or golf spike soles. For town, the plain-tip monk strap, with leather heel and sole (upper left). To wear with English flannels, gabardines, tweeds, the well-modeled wing-tip brogue (upper right). All shoes made of bucko and available in navy blue, brown, Hunter's green, deep beige and white.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Fewer Bad Food Ills.

Not many years ago summer was a justly dreaded time for children. The record of our grandfathers' families showed that of 10 or 13 children who were born, more than two-thirds on the average, were carried off before their fifth year, usually in the summer, from the dysenteries due to infected foods, particularly milk. Today our supervision of our milk supply is such that these tragedies have been almost eliminated and, in fact, our present problem is rather to reduce the high birth rate than to increase our measures of preventing infantile deaths.

Treated Like Star.

No Hollywood star ever has received as much scientific advice on her diet as has been given to the leading lady in the drama of modern summer life—the American cow. Some of the most eminent dietetic experts in the world discussed the subject in Atlantic City on June 7 and 8. The high nutritional qualities of certified milk are being improved and every step in the process of milk production, from the soil, the plant, the cow, to human consumption, is thoroughly canvassed.

In the delivery of clean milk to the infant, the housewife herself has some responsibility. Milk bottles left out on the doorstep too long will exude milk through the stopper, attracting insects, dogs and cats, thus contaminating the entire bottles. Dust and dirt collect on the stoppers, and every bottle top should be carefully washed and wiped before and after the stopper is removed.

Diarrheas in adults in the summer time are almost invariably due to contaminated food, and meats, popular opinion to the contrary, are more likely to be infected than vegetables. Some of the most virulent organisms do not produce any change in the odor of the food they contaminate.

Dietary Treatment.

The treatment of summer diarrhea, either in infant or adult, is largely dietary. A preliminary period of starvation is always advisable. The administration of fluids, however, is important and should be done by mouth. This is particularly true of infants after the starvation period, which should last 12 to 24 hours. The first food should be simple, such as warm weak tea, broth, bouillon, buttermilk, lemonade. Ginger ale is always very acceptable and apparently beneficial. It reduces nausea, as well as furnishing considerable nutrition. Proteins, such as soft-boiled eggs and scraped meat, are better tolerated than vegetables for several days.

The diet should be increased a few items at a time, adding milk, custards, soups, mashed potatoes, before such roughage vegetables as beans, peas or lettuce, tomatoes, etc., are used.

Drugs are not used very much. If there is discomfort, paregoric is valuable, and the dosage can be adjusted very carefully, drop by drop, to the requirements of the case.

Whether the use of castor oil is simply adding insult to injury, or whether it cleans out the offensive material, is a matter of opinion.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. Paintbrush to Clean.

An ordinary paint brush is an indispensable housecleaning implement. It does an excellent job of cleaning window sills, window shades and draperies. It is splendid for brushing the dust out of the framework of a sewing machine, wicker furniture and other intricate places.

Color Assumes a Definite Place In Latest Styles of Men's Clothes

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

COLOR is definitely becoming a staple idea in men's attire. Authorities have been trying to promote colorful, yet conservative clothes for men for a number of years, and slowly but surely these have subtly become an important factor in the style picture. With suits and accessories firmly established in the color scheme, shoes are now appearing in harmonizing hues and tints. Originally, they were planned to accompany clothes of the country type, but have appeared this summer as smart accompaniments for town suits.

Not only is color one of the striking features of these new models, but the styling is a decided deviation from the conventional shoes which have been on the market for years. Examples include a new wing-tip brogue; plain tip monk-strap shoe; a more informal wing-tip brogue with leather heel and sole; an unusual shoe patterned after a ski boot. These come in navy blue, hunter's green, deep beige, brown and white. The predominant note in men's shoes is toward classic simplicity; clean lines and an utter lack of confusing detail.

Bucko is one of the most popular materials for the smartest men's footwear. This sturdy, supple leather has been perfected until it now appears in a velvety velour surface, which is non-cracking and water repellent. It was formerly a typical sports-shoe material, but has emerged from this limitation and now accompanies suits of all types, except formal evening. With the great variety in designs and colors available this season, men have an unusual chance to concentrate on individuality in their choice of footwear. It is also an excellent time to replenish the shoe wardrobe—both for midseason and early fall.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 28.

ONE of the most resourceful as well as amusing people in Hollywood is Mr. Howard Greer, who these many years has been designing fancy clothes for the stars and satelites.

ALICE HUGHES.

Not long ago, sky-riding a plane bound for New York, Howard tired of reading and began brooding, as one is apt to do on a wearisome journey. Here are two of the vital questions that passed through the Greerian mind: "Why must so many fashion novelties originate in the skull of Schiaparelli? Why can't we American designers think up ideas that are both amusing and practical to wear?" And Greer kept right on brooding—over Kansas.

Finally, he came down with an idea that will soon be a reality on the hands of American women; namely, a three-fingered glove. For with the vogue for large rings, it is now hard to slip on, or even struggle into gloves. And Howard has originated a glove which is a mitt for the middle, ring and little fingers, so that the big rings women wear have plenty of room. The forefinger and thumb are gloved as usual. Between the mitt and forefinger, where women generally hold a cigarette, the lining is a contrasting color. Sounds crazy all right, but in a divine way, don't you think? The wagering, at post time, is that you'll like them.

And so Howard Greer, brooding in his sky-wagon over Kansas, came up with something new—and for once, at least, a novelty will appear on the market which is not tagged with the magic name of the demon "Schiap!"

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Again the local giddy-girls are jumping about, defying the humidity, for that big, beautiful Randolph Scott is in town to appear personally at the opening of his new picture, "High, Wide and Handsome," in which his vis-a-vis is the charming Irene Dunne. Of course, they know that Randy is an old married man now, but what do the little girls care. He's still a Dream Man!

* * * *

Even prettier than Randy, however, is another current delegate from the Gold Coast where the cameras grind, and that's little Sonja Henie, the skating star. The plump Blade Beauty is getting a little vacation from the old home movie lot, but she is also giving a look at another personal appearance skating tour for next winter. My, how the money rolled into the Henie coffers last season! That baby will never lack from herring!

* * * *

We surely have our little drammers, even in the ermine set. One of the prettiest girls who ever moved in the right gang on Long Island was Evelyn Hal McManus Pierce Warburton, whose second husband, "Buzz" Warburton, accidentally shot himself to death last fall. There was Wanamaker money in the family, but evidently Evelyn got none, for now she is working for one of the smart Fifth avenue shops!

* * * *

One of the most popular of the newer night clubs is the Yumuri, dedicated to things Cuban—victuals, drinks and rhythms. The place has just burst forth with a young lady named Portia Porter, who claims to be the first American girl bull fighter! Yoo-hoo, press agent! However, pretty Portia is not scrimmaging with bulls at the Yumuri, but is doing a perfectly harmless bull-fight dance.

* * * *

Our cut-ups are always at it. The other day two local pranksters named Alfred Leaman and Ed Sheedy smuggled half a dozen active monkeys into the suite on the Rex occupied by two pretties named Elise Plankington and Alice Gillmoro. The ship kept right on sailing for Italy, but things must have been right lively there for a spell. What fun!

* * * *

What can we do about these hemlines? They go up and up. Practically all the fall evening frocks are high in front and barely touch the ground in the rear. Pretty, too. And certainly we shall have to be very choosey about our evening slippers and stockings, for they'll be on display all the time!

Sulphur for Beauty.

The old-fashioned remedy of grandmother's day, sulphur, still remains one of the best of complexion aids, say modern beauty experts. However, today sulphur may be taken in much more palatable form, merely by eating a lot of the vegetables that have a high sulphur content. Among these are radishes, onions, celery, red cabbage, salad greens, Brussels sprouts and asparagus.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I SUPPOSE I should be all hot and bothered about the war in Spain and the labor troubles," sighed Janet M. "But I have my hands full getting three meals a day on the table, making ends meet and keeping the house from running away with itself. So I just think I'll leave politics to the men and concentrate on my own job."

The feminists would call that rank heresy, perhaps, and maybe it is. But sometimes we think that the world would be a lot better place to live in if everybody concentrated on doing his own job well. As for this idea that the women should do a lot of arm waving and politicalizing—well, that's all right for the women who haven't anything else to do. But most women we know have their hands pretty full at home. After all, keeping an active family on the dotted line is nobody's part-time job.

"To tell the honest truth, I'm more interested right now in how to keep my own boys at home after school than how to settle the Supreme Court issue. I that's being a back number, then I guess I'll have to be a back number."

"I'm trying to make our old barn over into a neighborhood clubhouse. My husband has put in a plank flooring and we've cleaned and whitewashed the inside, leaving the ladder steps into the loft because we thought that would give the place added lure. There's going to be gym equipment with punching bag, trapeze, rings and wrestling mat. And we're installing a counter with tall stools at one end where the boys can serve hot dogs, pop or ice cream. Around the other walls we're building two tiers of bleachers so they can have quite a gang at their bouts. Here they'll be allowed to do their worst . . . nobody's going to stop their noise or nag them about tracking in mud, and they can have as many of their gang as the place will hold, which will be a lot. In short, we're deliberately trying to make our place the gathering center for the neighborhood gang, because it's the best way we know of keeping our own clan in home radius. And I just happen to think that's important."

New Fruits, Greens Lend Salads New Appeal for Jaded Appetites

By Rebekah Blake.

SALADS are more important each day as the summer goes on because of the new fruits and vegetables that are coming into the markets. These cool and colorful dishes are especially attractive to jaded appetites and should be varied often to add new interest to your meals.

The first prize for The Post salad recipe contest, $3, was awarded Mrs. Mary Mayer, 228 Homewood terrace, Baltimore, Md., for her recipe for Raggedy Anne Salad.

Mrs. Charles A. Rehbein, 3221 Wheeler road, Congress Heights, D. C., won the second prize, $2, for her recipe for Rose Salad. Mrs. Frank E. Edwards, Box 78, Capitol Heights, Md., received the third prize, $1, for her recipe for Ducklings in the Pond Salad and Mrs. Ruth Hildebrand, 104 Little Falls street, Falls Church, Va., won the fourth prize, also $1, for her recipe for Indian salad. Mrs. J. H. King, 1623 Thirty-fifth street, Washington, D. C., won the fifth prize, $1, for her recipe for Tomato and Chicken Salad.

Here is Mrs. Mayer's recipe:

Raggedy Anne Salad.

2 cups chicken or potato salad
4 medium tomatoes, skinned and halved
4 hard-cooked eggs, halved lengthwise
¼ cup grated raw carrot
8 small cucumber pickles, halved lengthwise
16 cloves
8 lettuce leaves
Pimento.

Anne lies on a plate with half an egg for a head, cut side down, cloves for eyes, bits of pimento for nose and mouth, a drop of color on each cheek, and carrot hair. The body is a tomato half, cut side down, the skirt a lettuce leaf with a large spoonful of salad beneath. Arms and legs of celery—the arms have been cut down four times on one end for ¼ inch and left in ice water for fingers to open. The pickles make the slippers.

Rose Salad.

Dip small uniform tomatoes one at a time in boiling water; peel and chill thoroughly in the refrigerator until they are dry on the outside.

For eight roses you will need three packages of soft cream cheese. Soften the cheese by working it with a spoon until it will mold readily. Tint one half the cheese green, the other yellow. Then insert a 2-tined fork in the firmer end (stem) of the tomato and with a teaspoon dip into the cheese and level off a teaspoonful. Now place the teaspoon against the side of the tomato near the top and draw away the teaspoon. The cheese will have formed one petal of the rose. Continue around the tomato until the circle is complete. Then make a second row of petals just below and overlapping the first a little. If yellow and green coloring are used, the last row should be green. Now slip the rose off onto a cookie sheet covered with wax paper. Return to refrigerator to harden.

When ready to serve, slip a fork into the top of each and slip onto a bed of shredded lettuce. Place a teaspoon of mayonnaise in the top and on this place a tiny mound of caviar or a tiny mound of chopped cucumber.

Mrs. Edwards' recipe follows:

Ducklings in Pond Salad.

3 tablespoons gelatine
3½ cups cold water
2 cups boiling water
¾ cup lemon juice
1 cup sugar
Orange peel
Lemon coloring
6 peach halves
1 cup green grapes
½ pound cream cheese
12 halved blanched almonds
Raisins
Watercress
½ grapefruit shell

Brush a ring mold with vegetable oil. Soak gelatin in ½ cup cold water, dissolve in boiling water, add lemon juice, the rest of the cold water and coloring to make pale green. Place peaches, cavity side down, in the ring mold and pour on gelatine in cover. When congealed, add grapes to remaining jelly mixture and fill mold. Let stand until firm. Mold with fingers, little ducks out of cream cheese, using orange peal for beak, raisins cut in tiny pieces for eyes and halves of blanched almonds for wings. Place grapefruit shell, which has been thoroughly cleaned out and washed and dried, in center of mold, fill with mayonnaise. Garnish with watercress closely placed around the bottom of jelly portion of salad and inside between jelly and grapefruit half holding the mayonnaise.

Mrs. Hildebrand's recipe follows:

Indian Salad.

Prepare tomatoes as for stuffed tomato salad.

Insert in each, 6 to 8 short stalks of boiled asparagus tips. Put over asparagus, resting on rims of tomato ¼-inch rings cut from green pepper, and over green rings, red pepper rings.

Arrange for individual service on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with Indian dressing.

Tomato and Chicken Salad.

½ cup cold boiled rice
¾ cup diced cooked chicken
½ cup string beans, cut
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
½ cup diced celery
½ tablespoon minced parsley
2-3 cup mayonnaise
2-3 cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
½ teaspoon salt
Tomato ice

Combine chicken, beans, rice, pepper, celery and parsley. Combine mayonnaise and whipped cream. Soften gelatin in cold water five minutes, then melt it over hot water. Cool. Add salt and combine all ingredients except tomato ice. Line refrigerator pan with waxed paper. Pour a layer of tomato ice, previously frozen to mushy state, into freezing tray. Then arrange layer of chicken salad and cover with another layer of chicken salad and cover with another layer of tomato ice. Freeze. Serve in slices on lettuce. Serves 16.

England's Naval Attache To Welcome York's Crew

Capt. Bradley and Wife Probably Only Persons Who Have Not Journeyed to Newport Expressly to See Historic Cup Race.

By Dudley Harmon.

Among the many from Washington in Newport for this gala week-end, we have discovered, we think, the only one whose primary purpose in being there is neither the American Cup races, the Marsyl Stokes debut, or the William Vanderbilts' combined farm-and-amateur-hour party tomorrow evening.

He is Capt. F. C. Bradley, naval attache of the British Embassy. He is at the Viking Hotel in the Rhode Island resort in preparation for the arrival of the British battleship, H. M. S. York, which is due to drop anchor there sometime today.

Washington debutantes and dowagers who met the officers of the York when she tied up at the navy yard here almost two years ago will have a chance to renew their acquaintances later in the season. The British queen of the seas is due to come here some time early in October, and the Embassy will no doubt do its share of entertaining for those in command of the ship.

The York has acquired a new commander since its previous visit, however, Vice Admiral S. J. Meyrick, who is making his first trip to the United States. Admiral Sir Matthew Best formerly commanded the ship, and gave a large tea party on board when it was in Washington. Lady Best and their attractive daughter, Margaret, also were here at the time, and were widely entertained.

Capt. and Mrs. Bradley will soon pack up for a vacation in England. They are sailing September 1 for a brief two-weeks in their homeland. On their return, they will move from their apartment at 2102 Connecticut avenue into another one, Mrs. Bradley only wishes she knew where.

To go back to Newport—it's hard to stay away from the subject these days—Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock are giving a dinner at Ker Arvor before the ball at which the former's sister, Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff, will be among the dinner guests.

Spending the week-end with the Fahnestocks will be Mr. and Mrs. George Temple Bowdoin, Mrs. Albert Homan and Paul Boker, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. John Drummond Kennedy, formerly of Washington, will take care of some of the Fahnestock's extra guests.

Other socially active Washington residents at Newport include Mrs. Skirvin Adams, who entertained Tuesday at a luncheon at her home, Beach Mound.

German Embassy Attache to Attend Newport Cup Races

The First Secretary of the German Embassy, Herbert Scholz, expects to leave Saturday for Newport, where he will attend the festivities in connection with the cup races. He will sail August 4 for his home in Germany.

Frau Scholz has been there since early in the summer visiting her parents, Herr and Frau von Schintzler, at their country place in Bavaria.

Herr Scholz will be gone six weeks and when he returns, Frau Scholz will accompany him.

Forbes Morgan Wedding August 7

On August 7 an awning will stretch across the sidewalk of New York City's busy Fourth Avenue and up to the door of brownstone Calvary Episcopal Church on the tip of Gramercy Park North. The occasion will be the wedding of William Forbes Morgan, jr., and Miss Marie Newsom, of Shawnee, Okla.

The approaching marriage of Mr. Morgan and Miss Newsom came as a surprise to many of their friends as there had been no formal announcement of their engagement. Miss Newsom is the daughter of William E. Newsom, of Shawnee, where she was born.

Mr. Morgan is the only son of the late W. Forbes Morgan, who at his death last April was president of the Distilled Spirits Institute, Inc., and former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

The prospective bridegroom's mother, who died in 1920, was the former Miss Edith Livingston Hall, a daughter of the late Valentine G. Hall and an aunt of Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt. She was the first wife of the late Mr. Morgan.

On the paternal side, Mr. Morgan is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Forbes Morgan. He is a real estate broker.

Mrs. W. M. Ferguson Is Guest Of Son and Daughter-in-Law

Army-Navy Country Club Party Is Given in Her Honor by Representative and Mrs. Phil Ferguson, of Oklahoma.

Representative and Mrs. Phil Ferguson, of Oklahoma, entertained at the Army-Navy Country Club last evening in compliment to the former's mother, Mrs. W. M. Ferguson, of Wellington, Kans., who has arrived to be their guest for several weeks. Mrs. Ferguson, with her son, Mr. W. M. Ferguson, jr., landed in New York a month ago aboard the Queen Mary after a five months world tour. Mr. Ferguson returned West by plane, while she remained in New York to visit her daughter, Mrs. Clement Clark, before coming to Washington.

Their world trip took them from Seattle to Shanghai, China, where they spent some time before going into the interior and then to India, Egypt and the Holy Land. They made only short stops in Europe, devoting most of their time to the countries of the Orient. Mrs. Ferguson, with her son and daughter-in-law will attend the reception at the Egyptian Legation this evening, which will be of particular interest because of her recent visit to that country.

A little side light on the trip is the fact that she and her son were enjoying their tour so much they casually forgot to mention their exact itinerary, and it was necessary for Representative Ferguson to enlist the aid of the State Department on one occasion, so he could communicate with them.

The party which he and Mrs. Ferguson gave yesterday at the Army and Navy Country Club in honor of his mother, was one where the guests arrived early and stayed late. The invitations were for 5 o'clock, so those who desired to swim in the club pool could do so, while others enjoyed mint juleps on the lawn. Later they went to the clubhouse for a buffet supper and dancing.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Russell Brown and Mr. Robert Brown. Representative and Mrs. Charles McLaughlin. Representative and Mrs. Harry B. Coffee, Representative and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Representative Jack Dempsey, Representative Paul Greever, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Nichols. Representative and Mrs. John Huston. Representative Harold Cooley, Representative and Mrs. Martin Dies. Representative and Mrs. Lewis Tyler, of Quantico; Maj. and Mrs. George Stocks, and Capt. and Mrs. L. B. Clay.

Robert Kelley Off to Turkey

New Secretary of Embassy to Visit England and the Continent.

Robert F. Kelley, recently appointed First Secretary of the American Embassy in Turkey, sailed on the steamship Washington yesterday from New York.

Mr. Kelley's going will leave Washington hostesses with one less bachelor to make up their dinner parties. He has long been the chief of the Division of Eastern European Affairs of the State Department.

He expects first to go through England and then spend some time also on the Continent before arriving in Istanbul. Mr. Kelley has had a meteoric career since entering the foreign service. His first post was that of vice consul to Calcutta, India, in 1923. He returned to take up his duties here in 1925 as assistant chief of the Division of Eastern European Affairs, and was made chief of the division.

Mmes. Auchincloss And Gregg Return From Yacht Trip

Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss and Mrs. Mondell Gregg have returned to their homes here after a cruise on the former's yacht, the Bonita. Mrs. Gregg expects to leave the end of this week for a ranch in the West, where she usually spends part of each summer.

On their trip, Mrs. Auchincloss and Mrs. Gregg cruised along the New England coast, with stops at Kennebunk, Me., and a visit to Newport to see Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, sr. They were gone about two weeks. Mrs. Auchincloss has not made definite plans for the rest of the summer.

Many Washingtonians Visit Virginia Beach

Among the recent arrivals at Virginia Beach from Washington are Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Wallace and Miss Louise Morse who are stopping at the Idlewhyle Hotel.

Celebrities Aid in Mortar Board Work

Miss Nancy Finch Acts as President for Group of 65.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Washington boasts one of the 27 Mortar Board Alumnae Clubs in the United States. Its membership of 65 includes several women who are listed in this year's "American Women," the official who's who among women of the Nation.

One of these is Mary Meek Atkeson (Mrs. Blaine F. Moore), who, with Thomas Clark Atkeson, wrote "Pioneering in Agriculture, a Hundred Years of American Farming," published last spring. She is also author of "Women on the Farm," "Shining Days" and other books and plays, and has recently been writing a series of magazine articles on farming in Ireland, for agricultural magazines—the result of a summer of study there last season.

Also in the membership of the local club are Bess Goodykoontz, assistant commissioner of education; Genevieve P. Hendricks, lecturer on decoration and furniture; Frederika Hodder, co-director of Camp Holton, in Naples, Me.; Wilma Bruce de Rycke, instructor in the training department of the personnel division of Woodward & Lothrop; Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor; Mary Louise Brown, dean of women at American University, and Adele H. Stamp, dean of women at Maryland University.

Miss Nancy Finch Alumnae President

The president of the Alumnae Club this year is Miss Nancy Finch, daughter of the chief of the Bureau of Mines, and Mrs. John Wellington Finch, of Chevy Chase. Miss Finch has been active in the marionettes project of the Washington Junior League, and has also done much in this line individually, presenting shows for children in orphanages and teaching them how to make their own puppets.

Each year since the local club was started, four years ago, it has given a Christmas party for a group of children from one of the orphan homes, with Miss Finch as hostess for the occasion. Last year the children, in a desire to show their appreciation, gave a cheer for their hostesses: "Two, four, six, eight, who do we appreciate—the Elks!" They looked at each other, realizing something was not just right, and quickly corrected it to "the ladies!"

The members also have made scrapbooks for Children's Hospital and other children's institutions, and the first year they were organized went regularly to the Red Cross to shellack the books of braille which had been transcribed for the blind. Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, who was the first president; Mr. Gilchrist, Mrs. Ellen Jack Schoper, secretary to Senator Pope, who was president the second year, and Miss Laura Hughes, one of this year's officers, also learned braille transcription and have continued it since by the slate and pencil method, transcribing short books and articles.

Others Aid in Social Service

Two of the members, Miss Clothilde Brouchod and Mrs. Anne Akre, are in social service work, Miss Ruth Sheldon and Miss Isabelle Dynes, who has been treasurer for the past two years, are associated in the food demonstration department of the gas and electric company. A former member, Miss Marian Glaeser, is now in India, teaching in a small village.

Another member is Miss Edith McCauley, head of the department of junior college English at Gunston Hall, who is now on her ninth tour abroad. She was a delegate to the Altrusa convention in Mexico City in June and returned from there in time to leave with a party of 20, for which she will act as guide, on a bus tour of the continent. They will be gone until the end of September.

Meetings of the club are held at the homes of members or as "field trips" to places of interest in the Capital. One was a special trip through the White House, another a visit to the Folger Library and a third to the Naval Observatory. Two meetings were on the campus of Maryland University, where the club co-operates with the active chapter. At one of these, last November, Mrs. F. D. Coleman, national alumnae president, was guest of honor.

Has 64 Chapters In Colleges

Mortar Board, which was founded in 1918, has 64 collegiate chapters, composed of senior women selected as outstandnig in scholarship, leadership and service. Hour Glass, the senior honor society of George Washington University, has been inspected with a view to having a chapter there.

Present officers of the Alumnae Club, in addition to Miss Finch, are Mrs. Carol Paxton Brainard, vice president; Mrs. Ruby Kramer, secretary, and Miss Laura Hughes, treasurer. They succeeded Mrs. Ellen Jack Schoper, who was president last year and secretary during the first two years of the club's history; Mrs. Carl Gerber, vice president; Mrs. Janet Flood, secretary, and Miss Isabelle Dynes, treasurer. Mrs. Gilchrist, was first president; Mrs. Helen Beelar, vice president the first two years; Mrs. Schoper, first secretary and Miss Virginia Cooke the first treasurer.

Hawaii Schools Stress English And Gardening

Mrs. Morris Freeman, Honolulu Teacher, Tells Problems.

ENGLISH AND GARDENING are the two subjects emphasized in the elementary schools of Hawaii, according to Mrs. Morris Freedman, a fifth grade teacher, in Waialua School, near Honolulu, who is in the Capital for a short visit with her cousin, Miss Angeline Frias. She came to the States as one of the 30 members of the Hawaiian teaching staff attending the recent convenion of the National Education Association in Detroit.

Because of the many children of Chinese, Japanese, Korean and Hawaiian parentage in the schools, the problem of teaching them the correct use of English is much greater than that of teaching the same subject in the average school here. They hear only the language of their parents at home and, when they are in the classroom, find themselves much confused by English grammar.

Garden Teachers For All chools

Because of the fact the islands are chiefly agricultural, gardening is one of the important subjects included in the school courses from the primary grade through high school. Each school has a garden teacher who works under a traveling supervisor, who directs the work in all the islands. The children have their own garden plots for practical application of their instruction on the school grounds and many of them maintain their own gardens at home as well, competing for prizes which are awarded at the end of the season.

Waialua School is located some distance from Honolulu, in a rural community, and is one of the largest rural elementary schools in the islands, with 1,000 pupils. A high school of corresponding size is located near it. The standard of rural education is, if anything, higher there than in the States, Mrs. Freedman believes, and certainly more uniform, with no one-room country schools such as are found in some sections here.

The children of the different races get along happily together and their parents co-operate in the Parent-Teacher Associations. When an Oriental mother comes to the schoolroom to visit or inquire about one of her children she bows low, with the utmost courtesy, and is unfailing in her expression of appreciation for what is being taught, says Mrs. Freedman. There is an unusual interest on the part of the fathers, too, in the school program.

Mrs. Freedman's husband is also an educator. He is superintendent of the Territorial Training School for Boys, the only such institution in Hawaii. There are about 200 boys, sent there from the courts, and the school has a faculty of 40 instructors. Mr. Freedman was unable to leave long enough to accompany his wife on her trip to the convention.

This is her first visit to the States. She was born in the Islands, as was her mother. She had the exciting experience of seeing her first snow when she stopped in Glacier National Park, and also her first black crow—and strangely enough, the crow was almost as much of a curiosity to her as the snow. She had seen one mounted and always wanted to see one on the wing.

On her arrival in Washington she called on the Hawaiian delegate, Samuel W. King, who has frequent calls from his constituents, despite the fact he represents one of the most distant points in the nation. He is remaining in Washington until Congress adjourns and will then return to the islands to look after business there before the new session convenes. Mrs. King and their younger children, Mauli-Ola, Paliku and Pauline, who are now in Maine, will return to their apartment at the Roosevelt Hotel in time for the opening of school. The older son, Samuel, who was graduated from Yale last spring and the eldest daughter, Charlotte, are now in Europe and will also return the end of August.

Mrs. Freedman has found Washington the most attractive of all the cities she has visited, she says, and a spirit of friendliness here which more clearly approaches that in Hawaii. She will sail from San Francisco on her return on August 20.

Committeewomen from All States Are Invited By Hamilton.

Work of Division Will Be Discussed at Session August 11.

REPUBLICAN committeewomen from all the States have been invited to come to Washington August 11 for the first general conference on the party's 1938 election campaign. The hospitality of the headquarters of the League of Republican Women, soon to be opened, will be extended to them during their stay.

Telegrams were sent by Chairman John Hamilton to all national committeewomen to come for a discussion of the work of the women's division, following his conference with Mrs. Worthington Scranton, national vice chairman, at Scranton, Pa., after his recent arrival from Europe.

The women's division has been inactive since last November. It was headed during the 1936 campaign by Mrs. Wilma D. Hoyal, of Arizona.

Seek Democratic Support.

The committeewomen seldom have held a separate Nation-wide meeting, usually discussing their special problems during sessions of the entire committee. Each State is represented in that group by a man and a woman. Mrs. Virginia White Speel is the committeewoman from the District.

The party will endeavor to gain enough strength next year, Mr. Hamilton said last month to influence vitally the 1940 Presidential campaign. In 1938 one-third of the Senate, the entire House of Representatives and officers of most States will be chosen.

The chairman expressed the belief the Republicans will retain their party name and essential character, but will try to attract conservative Democrats.

Now Free to Talk.

Republican leaders outside of Congress have said little about national issues during the last eight months. A series of radio talks in May was their only effort to attract Nation-wide attention.

They took little part in the court-hill controversy, adopting the strategy of letting Democrats fight among themselves. Now that the bill has been sidetracked, observers pointed out, the leaders probably will feel more free to criticize Roosevelt Administration policies directly.

The organization has maintained a skeleton staff at headquarters across from the White House and has been soliciting funds by mail to reduce the party deficit.

Bicycle Party Given by Club At Tidal Basin

A group of members of the Washington Comptometer Club and their friends meet regularly at the bicycle house at the Tidal Basin and go from there for a bicycle ride after office hours.

The bicycle parties are among the activities to be held throughout the year by members of the club. The Comptometer Club was formed last winter and continues its program through the summer for those who remain in the Capital during the warm months. Horseback riding and tennis are included in the summer program. Bowling, which was a popular recreation with many members of the organization in the winter and spring, has been temporarily discontinued.

Among those who attended the bicycle outing this week were Miss Ellen Dugan, the chairman; Miss Vera McGonigal, Mr. Joseph Cadell, Mr. Kyle McGhee, Miss Wilda Perry, Mr. Lawrence Harris, Mr. William King, Mr. James Francis, Mr. Marvin Fisher, Miss Marie Campbell, Mr. William Fallon, Mr. William Howard, Miss Vera Latona, Miss Betty Pichette, Mr. Jack Serafin, Miss Dorothy Walker, Mrs. C. Glenn Gray, Mrs. Frank Goss, of New York; Miss Ethel Gordon, Miss Mary Louise Sutton and Miss Jean Sutton.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

FORTY of the girls who have spent the winter months learning domestic arts, under the direction of the Girl Home Makers Committee of the District of Columbia, Daughters of the American Revolution, are being provided a week at camp by the same committee this summer.

The Girl Home Makers Club was organized in 1930 by Mrs. Gary E. Walters, as State chairman of the committee, when Miss Helen Harmon was State regent. Mrs. Walters, like most people who do things in an outstanding way, has been kept on the job (and this is just one, incidentally, for she has also been hospitality chairman, in charge of arrangements for entertaining the national D. A. R. Congress ever since 1921).

Every Tuesday night from October 1 to May 1 she is at the Gospel Mission at 6:30. There the girls gather for their home-making classes. An average of 60 of the 100 club members is there each week, rain, sleet or snow. They are girls of foreign parentage or themselves foreign born. They spend the half-hour before 7 o'clock singing familiar songs as they gather around the piano while Mrs. Walters plays. At 7 the opening exercises are conducted, including a prayer used by the Home Makers clubs of the D. A. R. throughout the country; one verse of "America," the pledge to the flag and the Home Makers motto. Then they go to their classes.

* * * *

BIG SISTERS bring little sisters along, so not all of the girls are taught grown-up subjects. There is a kindergarten group of about 25 children, taught by Mrs. Carman Colburn, vice chairman of the committee, and Mrs. Adeline Tomlinson, regent of American Chapter of the D. A. R., who has been working in the project from the beginning.

Miss Phebe Ross teaches knitting to the older girls; Miss Margaret Fraser, past regent of Major L'Enfant Chapter, who is a dietitian, gives them lessons in preparing a balanced lunch to take to school. She suggests that they use the waxed paper from bread for wrapping their sandwiches and other simple lessons bringing in the materials at hand.

Mrs. Walters teaches sewing, embroidery, crocheting, knitting, cooking, any of the things the girls desire to learn, and Mrs. Contee S. Ficklen is another member of the "faculty."

Last winter the girls made pillow cases to give their mothers for Christmas and tam, purse and scarf sets for themselves, crocheted of wool. They also embroidered centerpieces with all materials furnished by the D. A. R. As they do their needlework there is usually a talk by a guest.

Miss Helen Stout was among those who spoke last winter, telling of the customs of the American Indians and showing the costumes and relics which she brought with her.

On Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas special parties were arranged by Mrs. Walters and her committee. There were 50 dolls for the little girls provided on the Christmas tree last season.

Later in the year, prizes were given for the best menu planned and these were judged by Miss Grace Bulman, of the Veterans' Administration, who is a member of Catherine Montgomery Chapter, of which Miss N. Frances Sanford is regent and Mrs. Walters, a past regent.

* * * *

But all that is during the regular club season. It is now that the climax comes with a week in camp for 40 of the older girls—and here's where Mr. Walters lends a hand as "Dad" of the club. He is the chauffeur who provides transportation to and from Holliday House, the camp of the Girls' Friendly Society, where the D. A. R. provides the week's outing for the club members. With Mrs. Walters, he takes out ten of the girls each week, taking five out and bringing back five who have finished their vacation; then taking five more on the second trip and bringing in the last five on their return to Washington.

At 10:30 Monday morning, the first carful of next week's campers will leave Gospel Mission for Holliday House and seven days of fresh air and fun in the country.

Chinese 29th Army Defends Old Bridge.

A Japanese attack on historic Marco Polo bridge 14 miles southwest of Peiping was repulsed by the Twenty-ninth Chinese army shown above behind a hastily constructed sandbag barricade. This picture and the one at the right are among the first of hostilities to reach America. They were flown from China to San Francisco and wirephotoed to Washington. Japanese troops yesterday were concentrating fire on railway stations near Peiping.

* X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1937 15

Bob Burns Says:

City people laugh at us country boys when we come to town and they like to watch our discomfort.

One of these smart city boys came down home one time and he went out fishin' with Grandpaw Snazzy and me and he thought he was gonna show us up because he had all the latest fancy equipment like the bamboo rod and the most expensive reel, and he mighta got away with it if he hadn't happened to hook a fish about 5 inches long. The fella got so excited, his eyes bulged out and he started reelin' this fish in and reeled it right to the end of the pole and then he yanked the pole straight up in the air and sat there, holdin' it and tremblin'.

He turned to Grandpaw Snazzy and he says, "What'll I do with him?" Grandpaw says, "Well, in a case like that, Buddy, I believe I'd climb up the pole and stab him."

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

U. F. W. A. Notes.

In all, 20 locals have affiliated with the United Federal Workers of America, with a paid-up membership—as of the date of application—of 2,800. . . . An organizing committee for colored workers has been established, with U. S. Tate at the head. . . . Henry Rhine, head of the organizing staff, is now in the South arranging organizing committees in cities where there are Federal employes; regional organizers will be appointed there and offices established. . . . Offices are established in connection with C. I. O. offices in St. Louis, Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Detroit . . . The District organizing committee reports itself as set for the recruiting job here; sub-committees are being organized for special functions, such as education, recreation.

A. F. G. E. Notes.

A report showing 170 new members has been turned in by A. F. G. E. Lodge No. 7, composed of barge line employes at St. Louis, Mo.; this brings the lodge total to 294 . . . George A. Warren has been re-elected president of Interior Department Lodge, No. 35; Frederick A. Hefferman was elected vice president; Irene Wright, second vice president; Eugenia E. Miller, secretary-treasurer, and Nevin B. Johnson, sergeant at arms . . . Why the A. F. G. E. is affiliated with the A. F. of L., as quoted from the Government Standard: "Government employes need the moral support and legislative barking of wage earners throughout the Nation" . . . "The A. F. of L. is a thoroughly American institution in name and tradition, dedicated to the American worker" . . . "Every sound piece of employe legislation has found a supporter in the A. F. of L." . . . Quoting President Stengle: "It is, therefore, my duty to say to all lodge officers and to the membership at large that they will be committing a grevious error should they solicit membership from any employe of the Federal Government who is not whole-heartedly in harmony with American ideals of government."

The amateur talent contest for Government employes continues its auditions tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel, when entries from the I. C. C., State Department, General Accounting Office, White House, Tariff Commission and PWA compete for the best talent in the service. The hour is 8 to 10. The talent includes:

From I. C. C.—G. B. Slebos, Bryant Collins, Miss Toni Eyle and Edwin H. Cage. From P. W. A.—Miss Mathilda C. Heuser, the Dawson Brothers (Harry and Tom), Guy Edward Gaston, M. H. Smith and Bill Sanderson. From the Navy Department—Don Buckley and Jack McCalley. From the State Department—Miss Agnes Utley, Miss Virginia Nelson and Miss Louella Livengood. Other entries are Miss Evelyn Guthman, General Accounting Office; Frank Sanderson, Executive Office; Ruth K. Close, Tariff Commission, and John Frommer, Railroad Retirement Board.

Campers' Note.

Attention, campers: Here is an opportunity for some one seeking a companion for a camping trip of about two weeks in the mountains. Robert F. Bauer, a former teacher, now with the Social Security Section of Internal Revenue, wants some one who has a camping outfit or a trailer with his car. The trip would be made as soon as mutually convenient. His address is 2039 New Hampshire avenue, apartment 106.

The social committee of the Interior Department Recreation is casting around these days among the 9,800 employes in Interior to find talent to assist in entertaining the throng that will gather at its first social function and dance, to be held sometime in August.

Dancers of the Virginia reel and the old-fashioned square dance, hill billies and black-face comedians, vocalists, harmonica players violinists, monologists, quartets—all of these are being sought by Mrs. Evelyn Adams, of General Land Office, and Ian Forbes, chairman of the social committee. The tryouts will be held this week.

There will be two orchestras, one for modern swing and one for the square dances.

Inaugurating the association's activities, this grand jamboree is planned to bring all Interior personnel into closer relationship and friendlier understanding.

Blackfriars Institute Brings Church and Theater Together; Group to Present Its Version of 'If I Were King' Monday Night

The church comes to the theater and one of the friars stands by to handle lighting effects for "If I Were King."

The art of makeup is a strange one for holy orders, but it is quickly learned by sisters and brothers of the Blackfriars Drama Institute.

Photos by H. B. Rauth.

After centuries of mutual antagonism, the church and the theater are getting together again. Washington will see a concrete proof of the reconciliation when a group of nuns and priests, banded together under the aegis of the Blackfriars Institute of Dramatic Art, produces its version of "If I Were King" in the Catholic University Auditorium Monday evening.

The institute, a six-week summer school being conducted at the university, is an outgrowth of the Blackfriars Guild, founded in Washington five years ago by the Rev. Urban Nagle, O. P. Father Nagle decided that the best way to raise the standards of the American theater was to improve the taste of the audience.

The guild instituted a program of education, including the formation of amateur groups in various parts of the country and instruction in schools. Its purpose is the production of plays which are "acceptable without being objectionable."

A tribute to the success of its campaign is the fact that the Blackfriars Institute is to become a graduate school of the drama at conservative Catholic University this fall. Courses in playwriting, acting, directing and staging will be given. The Rev. Gilbert V. Hartke, O. P., of the university's faculty, will direct the department.

C. U. is the first Catholic university in the country to realize the importance of the drama as a part of a college curriculum.

Providence College lent Father Nagle to Washington to conduct the present institute. He is being assisted by the Rev. Thomas F. Carey of the C. U. faculty.

The students, who are chiefly priests and laymen who direct amateur groups and wish to learn more about the theater, study lighting, makeup and all the other technical aspects of the stage. They do little of the actual acting. Casts are recruited from local schools, amateur groups and members of the local chapter of the Blackfriars Guild. Six one-acts and 5 full-length plays have been produced.

"If I Were King" will be repeated August 5 in the Sylvan Theater.

August 7 and 8, several hundred Catholics are expected here from more than 30 States to organize a National Catholic Theater Conference which will operate on a Nationwide scale to further the work begun by the Blackfriars.

Montgomery Road Project Stirs Protest

D. C. Motor Club Assails County Board, State Commission.

The District of Columbia Motor Club of the American Automobile Association last night assailed both the Montgomery County Commissioners and the Maryland Roads Commission for "unjust" expenditures in improving Montgomery County roads.

Through its manager, Washington L. Cleveland, the club issued a statement berating the two bodies for carrying "unnecessary" improvements in the northern or rural section of the county and neglecting the heavily traveled thoroughfares of the populous suburban district adjacent to the Capital.

In the statement, the club called on the county and roads commissioners "to recognize the injustice that has been perpetrated on the taxpayers and motorists of the metropolitan area" and "to take immediate steps to construct and improve the State and county projects in that area that have been urged over a period of years and which are of such vital importance."

2 Homes on Road.

Prior to issuing the statement, Cleveland took newspaper reporters to Poolesville and carried them over a two-and-a-half mile road that is being constructed as a continuation of the so-called Willard road, between Poolesville and River road.

Cleveland said "The Willard road, extending 2½ miles west from Poolesville to the River road, is being rebuilt by the Maryland State Roads Commission pursuant to authorization by the board of county commissioners of Montgomery County at a reported cost of $12,260.67."

There are only two residences on this road, which are owned by the heirs of Mrs. Mary F. Willard and Ewalt J. Willard, and Albert M. Bouic."

Declared Unjustified.

"The District of Columbia Motor Club of the American Automobile Association is of the opinion that the expenditure of this sum of money in the upper county is wholly unjustified when considered in connection with the many projects in the metropolitan area of the county, such as Connecticut avenue, from the District line north to Chevy Chase Lake; the Old Georgetown road, from Bethesda to Halpine; the Jones Mill road, from Forest Glen to Capitol View; the Brookville road, from East Woodbine street to the East-West highway; the uncompleted portion of the Viers Mill road, between Wheaton and Rockville, and the approaches to the Kensington overpass, all of which have been made the subject of repeated requests for construction and improvement over a period of years but which still remain in their original condition despite the fact that they serve thousands of motorists daily.

"The American Automobile Association calls upon the board of county commissioners of Montgomery County and the State roads commission to recognize the injustice that has been perpetrated on the taxpayers and motorists of the metropolitan area of Montgomery County and to take immediate steps to construct and improve the State and county projects in that area which have been urged over a period of years and which are of such vital importance."

Firemen's Leader Clashes With Clubwoman at House Hearing.

Bills which seek to give firemen a 5-day week and police and firemen the privilege of retiring with pensions after 25 years' service produced conflicting testimony yesterday at a hearing before a subcommittee of the House District Committee.

C. E. McGhee, president of the City Fire Fighters Association, was the principal witness for the firemen. He urged the sub-committee to report both measures favorably.

The bills were opposed by the District Commissioners and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, and Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, also spoke against them.

In Sharp Exchange.

Mrs. Howard, the wife of a fireman, and McGhee exchanged sharp words during the hearings as the firemen's representative accused her of opposing all legislation in the interest of the fire department.

"The 5-day week is a good plan when the time arrives for it," Mrs. Howard said, "but now is not the time."

"I work for the good of the department, and not for the downfall and crucifixion of Fire Chief Schrom."

Representative Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, criticized the District Commissioners for opposing the bills which she introduced.

Objects to Expense.

The District heads asserted the five-day week would prove too costly at this time and would give firemen an advantage over policeman.

Maj. Brown said that the retirement plan would permit 43 policemen, regardless of their physical condition, to retire at once, although only 43 years old.

Representative Bernard (Progressive), of Wisconsin, joined McGhee and Mrs. Jenckes in support of the five-day week. McGhee charged the District treats its firemen "more poorly" than any comparable city in the country.

Abduction Trial Of D. C. Teacher Shifted to Aug. 5

Arraignment of Mrs. Marion W. Campbell, 40, Washington high school teacher, on a charge of abducting a 20-month Beltsville, Md., child, was postponed until August 5, at 2 p. m., Alan Bowie, Prince Georges County prosecutor, announced yesterday. The hearing was scheduled for today, but a continuence was granted because of Mrs. Campbell's "highly nervous condition," Bowie said.

Mrs. Campbell, a Washington high school teacher for more than 14 years, was arrested by State police July 19, a few minutes after she allegedly seized Phillip Shane from in front of his home and drove him away in her automobile. The next day Bowie placed charges of abduction and drunken driving against the woman. She was released on $1,000 bond several days later.

Plane Contract Awarded.

A contract, totaling approximately $827,838, for the construction of four twin-motored amphibian flying boats has been awarded to United Aircarft Corporation, Sikorsky division, Hartford, Conn., the Navy Department announced yesterday. Bids were opened July 23.

Gallinger Plans to Turn Away 'Unlisted' Expectant Mothers

U. S. Arranges Maternity Leaves for Women Employes.

Having a baby may be a business handicap in Maryland—where State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones has ruled that positions vacated by maternity leaves would be filled immediately by permanent employes—but the Federal Government does not see it that way.

Married women among the 46,413 "female Government workers" in the District of Columbia are free to have babies, often are encouraged to do so, and three years from now should be able to have them on full pay.

After that, if they forget about vacations and have no other use for sick leave, they can easily have a baby ever six years and never miss a pay check.

Under the uniform leave regulations which went into effect last year, "sick leave with pay shall be granted to employes during pregnancy and confinement." The amount of leave is limited to one and one-fourth days each month, but may be accumulated until there are 90 days. (That will take four years.)

In addition to this 30 days advance sick leave can be granted, to be paid back in the future. (That will take two years.) Add these two together, throw in Sundays and holidays and the regular annual leave and as the Government figures it—that is time enough.

Commissioner Jones said he considered motherhood required a full year and that he would grant no leave for less than that. The customary maternity leave in the District, however, is around two and three months.

Although the new law has not been in effect long enough for any woman to have much more than 15 days of leave accumulated, all departments are liberal in granting leaves without pay. Although this is an administrative matter, three months are usually granted willingly.

The Department of Labor professes a "sentimentality for babies" and none of the departments knows of "anybody losing a job on account of a baby." The Department of State said that as a rule there is "no hard feeling" about requests for maternity leaves. None would be willing, though, to grant the year Commissioner Jones named as a minimum.

Christensen Death Declared Suicide

The death of Carl W. Christensen, 27, of 2700 Rodman street northwest, who was found with a bullet wound in his head in Rock Creek Park Tuesday night, was officially classed a suicide yesterday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a suicide certificate after an investigation disclosed Christensen was despondent over a love affair. A note addressed to a young woman was found near the body.

Employed at the Bureau of Standards, Christensen left his home about 10 p. m. Tuesday. His body was found a short time later in Rock Creek Park. Police said a pistol was found in his hand.

Washington Area Gets $25,000 for River Work

The sum of $25,000 for examinations, surveys and contingencies in the Washington area is included in the list of allotments from the appropriation for river and harbor work approved this week by the Secretary of War.

The allotments approved total $29,971,230. For work in the Baltimore district $15,000 has been made available, and $100,000 has been set aside for improvement of the Thimble Shoal Channel in Virginia.

Dr. Seckinger Says Hospital Crowded Now With Cases.

Expectant mothers who plan to rely on public care were urged by the Health Department yesterday to register at once, so that prenatal treatments and hospitalization may be arranged.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, deputy health officer, stated that beginning at once Gallinger Hospital will refuse admittance to women who have not made advance arrangements for admittance.

"Gallinger Hospital is treating obstetrical cases in cots in corridors and hallways," he said. "It is unfair and unsafe for both the mothers and the hospital.

"Our average indigent mother waits until the last minute before thinking about a hospital," he continued. "Then she gets in a taxicab and appears at the doors.

"We want to have these women register for two reasons. One, so they can be examined for possible diseases, and two, so hospitalization can be properly arranged long in advance of the day of birth."

In order to help relieve the pressure on overcrowded Gallinger's maternity wards, healthy mothers will be encouraged to have their babies at home. The Health Department still stands ready to furnish physicians for the delivery, he said.

George Washington University Hospital and Georgetown Hospital already have a staff of obstetricians available for home deliveries, and Freedmen's Hospital will have one shortly, Dr. Seckinger declared.

Dr. George F. Ruhland, new chief health officer, in his first move under his new title, ordered Dr. Edgar A. Bocock to no longer admit every woman who appealed for a hospital bed. He explained that cases should be limited to the number of beds available.

Dr. Seckinger said he wanted all indigent mothers to register at the maternity clinic at least five months in advance of childbirth. Thorough treatment will follow for those who are found to have blood diseases.

He pointed out that more than half of the still births in Washington and deaths under two months are caused by syphilitic parents. Early treatment can save the baby's life, he declared.

Boy Defender Free, Father in Hospital

While his father remained in Gallinger Hospital under guard recovering from a stab wound, Louis Reed, 14, was released from the Receiving Home yesterday in his mother's custody.

The boy was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon Tuesday after he is alleged to have stabbed his father, George Reed, 56-year-old unemployed laborer, when, according to police, the latter struck Mrs. Ellen Reed, the boy's mother.

Edward M. Welliver, corporation counsel in charge of juvenile court prosecutions, said he would postpone action until after questioning the boy's father, who is charged with disorderly conduct. Reed suffered a knife wound in the back.

N. J. Man Cleared In Traffic Death

Arthur O. Fowler, 58, of 1826 Seventeenth street northwest, who died in Casualty Hospital last Sunday of injuries suffered in a traffic accident, met death "as a result of his own negligence," a coroner's jury found yesterday.

The verdict acquitted Albert H. Failey, 28, of Barrington, N. J., who was driving the automobile that collided with Fowler's car in the 1900 block or New York avenue northwest, July 20.

Fidelity Bank Reorganization Plans Studied

Shareholders Ask King to Aid in Drive to Reopen Institution.

The position of the First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Washington, which withdrew from further negotiations looking toward the purchase by it of the assets of the defunct Fidelity Building & Loan Association still is unchanged, Walter M. Bastian, lawyer for the new association, said last night.

"As far as we are concerned the letter from Harry P. Somerville to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board still stands," he declared.

In his letter, Somerville said that he and the directors of the new association had been advised by the Treasury Department that on liquidation the old Fidelity would be able to pay only 70 per cent to its 16,500 shareholders. He therefore said he saw no reason why the association "should be in the picture at all" if it is expected to pay depositors 85 per cent on their claims. Somerville is president of the First Federal Savings & Loan Association.

Meanwhile, as the Treasury was studying new plans for reorganization, Chairman King of the Senate District Committee was taking under advisement a shareholders' plea that he intercede in an effort to reopen the institution.

The committee of shareholders asked the Utah Senator to endeavor to bring the Controller of the Currency and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board into agreement on a reorganization plan that would charter the Fidelity as the First Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Senator King disclosed that he had asked officials of the office of Controller of Currency to do "what could be done" in the interests of the shareholders. He also said he proposed to call officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board soon in an effort to enlist their co-operation.

A spokesman for the FHLB said the Board will go the limit to protect the investment of the shareholders, if its services can be of any use.

100 District Children Sent to Health Camp

Nearly 100 underprivileged children left the Thomson school yesterday for a two-weeks stay at Camp Good Will, the Family Service Association's summer camp in Virginia.

Starting August 11, the date of the opening of the fourth and final camp period, the camp will inaugurate an adult education program for 50 mothers in need of recreation.

Horse to Bear Author Over Booth's Route

With the exception of a few minor inaccuracies, provided chiefly by Twentieth Century conditions, Richard Halliburton, the author, and his secretary-photographer, Jack Hamori, were to reenact today the wild ride of John Wilkes Booth the night he shot Lincoln.

At 5 a. m. Halliburton and Hamori will mount horses in front of the old Ford Theater and dash out of town over the route taken by the fleeing Booth.

The time set for the start of the reenacted flight is the first anachronism. Booth fled at night, but Halliburton and Hamori are fleeing in the morning, they said yesterday, because they wished to avoid the possibility of their mounts being frightened by heavy traffic.

In riding over the Booth route, Halliburton says he is merely following a technique of authorship. Although a number of authors have attempted to give an accurate account of Booth's escape, Halliburton feels, none has obtained the feeling and authenticity available in a step-by-step retracing of the route.

Furthermore, Halliburton has laid claim to quite a record in repeating the famous feats of historical figures. He crossed the Alps on an elephant as did Hannibal, swam the Hellespont as did Byron, became a Devil's Island prisoner as did Dr. Mudd and climbed Mount Fujiyama in midwinter.

Halliburton's second concession to modernity on today's ride is one of convenience. He will be accompanied by an auto, loaded with oats and water for the horses, sandwiches and cooling drinks for the riders.

1,200 D. C. Orphans Are Feted by Elks

Twelve hundred children attended the 27th Elks' outing for Washington's orphans yesterday at Glen Echo. Ranging from 3 to 16, they enjoyed the entertainment furnished by the Elks' Clown Band, Johnny Ray's puppets and Frank Portillio and his marionettes.

Joan Dougherty and Rita Johnson, tap dancers, and Fanny, the Singing Goose, Elk mascot, also entertained.

Thomas O'Donnell was chairman of the committee, and William S. Shelby, secretary.

Institutions represented were St. John's Orphanage, the Baptist Home for Children, St. Joseph's Home, Washington City Orphange, Washington Home for Foundlings, German Home, St. Vincent's Home, Swartzell Methodist Home, Masonic and Eastern Star Home and the Jewish Foster Home.

Board Chosen To Fix Fair Rate On D. C. Water

Riley Elgen, Col. Wheeler and Capt. Shingler Are Appointed.

The Commissioners yesterday appointed a three-man committee to report on whether a change in water rates is necessary.

Authorized by Congress "to determine the reproduction cost and historical cost of the water system and the proper water rate," the committee's appointment follows an announcement the day before that rates would go up 25 per cent over last year.

Rates were cut 25 per cent by Act of Congress in 1934. This year's appropriation bill erased the rate cut, and brought back the previous rate.

To investigate the possibilities of a further rise, Congress asked the Commissioners to set up a survey committee. On the committee are Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission; Lieut. Col. Raymond A. Wheeler, representing the War Department; and Capt. Don G. Shingler, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

The committee will serve without pay, but has $20,000 to spend for personnel and other costs of the survey.

D. C. Office Union Gets C.I.O. Status

A C. I. O. drive to organize white collar workers in the District was under way last night as Byron Hemphill, president of local 27, United Office and Professional Workers, received a C. I. O. charter for his group in a meeting at the Hotel Hamilton, Fourteenth and K streets northwest.

The charter was dated July 20, and followed a preliminary drive during the past month which brought the membership of the group to more than 100. After receiving the charter from James Gilman, vice president of the international organization, Hemphill stated, "We expect to start a membership drive among office workers of the District immediately."

Among those who addressed the meeting were Jacob Baker, head of the recently organized United Federal Workers, and Cedric Fowler, representative from C. I. O. headquarters.

Varied Fare Is Screen Outlook For Next Week

New Films and Holdovers Will Vie With Outdoor Amusements.

"Slave Ship," an exciting drama of mutiny on one of the last of the slave traders, will be the screen feature for the week beginning Friday at Loew's Capitol Theater. The costars of this Twentieth Century-Fox release are Warner Baxter and Wallace Beery. They are supported by a notable cast, including Elizabeth Allan, Mickey Rooney, Jane Darwell, Joseph Schildkraut, Arthur Bohl, Minna Gombell, Billy Bevan, Francis Ford, J. Farrell MacDonald, Edwin Maxwell and numerous others. The stage bill for the new week will be headlined by Jesse Crawford and His Orchestra, featuring Helen Crawford, pipe organist, known to radio millions as Mrs. Jesse Crawford. Other acts will round out the vaudeville bill.

Fred MacMurray, Frances Farmer and Charles Ruggles are the featured members of the cast in "Exclusive," the film play of newspaperdom that will occupy the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Lloyd Nolan, Fay Holden and Ralph Morgan are other important members of the cast. The story was written by John C. Moffitt, former newspaperman himself, and was directed by Alexander Hall. On the stage, the headliners of the vaudeville bill will be Gine, DeQuincy and Lewis, "society favorites," supported by Steve Evans in "Hollywood Snapshots," Wally Brown and Annette Ames, "Two American Tourists," and the Liazeed Troupe of Arabian tumblers and gymnasts.

The Rialto Theater, beginning Sunday, will offer Elizabeth Bergner in "Dreaming Lips" as chief photoplay attraction for its new week. The principal male roles in this newest of the Bergner screen vehicles will be Raymond Massey and Romney Brent, among the foremost of English actors. The story is described as an "unforgettable dramatic romance." As a companion feature, will be shown "Fish From Hell," a multiple-reel featurette of deep-sea fishing, showing a stirring battle with a whale. The French version of Walt Disney's "Three Little Pigs" will be included among the auxiliary atractions.

Moving half a block down F street, directly from its sensational week's engagement at Loew's Capitol Theater, "Saratoga," costarring Jean Harlow and Clark Gable, will be the major feature of the screen bill at the Palace beginning tomorrow. Supporting roles in this last picture in which Miss Harlow appeared are played by Lionel Barrymore, Frank Morgan, Una Merkle, Cliff Edwards, Walter Pidgeon and a long list of others. Short subjects and "Events of the Day" will complete the bill.

The exciting Tiffany Thayer story of the slot machine racket, "King of the Gamblers," comes to the screen at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow, with Claire Trevor, Lloyd Nolan and Akim Tamiroff in the pivotal roles. The title role is played by Tamiroff, who, on occasion, can be one of the most sinister figures on the screen. Larry Crabbe, Helen Burgess, Porter Hall, Harvey Stevens and Evelyn Brent also are members of the cast.

"The Road Back," Universal's picturization of Erich Maria Remarque's sequel to "All Quiet on the Western Front," continues the principal film feature of the bill at RKO-Keith's. Prominent in the long cast are John King, Barbara Read, "Slim" Summerville, Louise Fazenda, Richard Cromwell, Etienne Girardot, John Emery, Andy Devine, Lionel Atwill, Spring Byington, William B. Davidson and many others. The short subjects also are being continued.

The Marx Brothers in "A Day at the Races," their maddest and most hilarious comedy, will continue their downtown popularity on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Maureen O'Sullivan, Douglas Dumbrille, Allan Jones and many others support the stars. Short subjects and "Events of the Day" will round out the program.

The four major subjects on the new screen bill beginning tomorrow at the Trans-Lux Theater are "Battling Bettas," an underwater short-reel in color; a pictorial visit to Edward Everett Horton's ranch; "King Winter," a thrill picture, and "Indian Serenade," a picture of charm and good humor, also in natural color. Newreel coverage of the world will have its usual place on the program.

"Maedchen in Uniform," one of the most discussed film features ever made, will be revived as chief feature of the bill for the week beginning next Sunday at the Little Theater. The foremost roles in this poignant story of a girls boarding school are played by Dorothea Weick, Hertha Thiele and Emilia Unda. Short subjects and newsreel will be added.

With summer at its height, so is Glen Echo Park, Washington's only free-admission amusement park. All of the 50-plus amusement devices are in full operation from 9:30 a. m., when the Crystal Pool opens, until midnight. Cooling rides, thrilling coaster dips, dancing in the Spanish Garden Ballroom, every night except Sunday, and the myriad other features insure a full afternoon of evening of fun.

The summer festival committee of the Community Center Department and the office of National Capital Parks next week will present two attractions, instead of one, in the National Sylvan Theater. On Tuesday night, the regular festival program will be provided by the Lisa Gardiner Dancers. On Thursday night, the Little Theater Group of the Blackfriars Institute of Dramatic Art will present Justin Huntley McCarthy's drama, "If I Were King."

Mackay and Matthews.

Barry Mackay, who was Jessie Matthews' leading man in the recently completed "Gangway," and earlier in "Evergreen," has been signed to play opposite her again in her forthcoming musical "Sailing Along," which went into production last week. Jack Whiting will be Jessie's dancing partner and Roland Young and Noel Madison are importantly cast.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Strong Meat Is Offered Filmgoers in 'Slave Ship,' A Vivid Thriller of the African Slave-Trading Days

Romance and Violence Are Combined in a Picture Alternately Gentle and Turbulent; Correspondents File Their Briefs in Matter of National's Policy Change; Another "Premiere" in the Offing; Bernheimer Promotes from Ranks; Notes of Theater.

THE soft lure of the tropics, square-riggers silhouetted against gorgeous sunsets and lazy, drifting clouds; quiet Virginia towns, broad Jamaican acreages, growing gentle crops—these are the more romantic aspects of "Slave Ship," the Twentieth Century-Fox production costarring Warner Baxter and Wallace Beery, that were unfolded before a small preview audience in the Fox projection room yesterday afternoon.

BELL.

But these placid intervals are only brief respites in the turbulent action of a slave-running drama that develops a mutinous crew, shows shiploads of helpless blacks chained and scourged in the hold of the ship and reaches a climax of gun-play and blazing hull as the hoo-doo ship sinks under the ramparts of St. Helena, where the heroic captain turns in his murderous crew—for love, but not of them.

If ever there was what the industry terms an "action drama," this is it. The barque aboard which most of the action takes place was a "blood ship" from the day of its launching, with which the picture opens. Its hard luck is never shaken off. Knife-throwing sailors, equally adept at hurling marlin spikes, are shot out of the rigging and drop into the embracing sea like rats driven from a sinking ship as they are being driven from a cause that stamps them all as "rats"—with one or two notable exceptions. No place to take a nap.

"Slave Ship" makes no attempt to pose as historical drama, beyond the fact that it utilizes the fag end of the illicit slave-trading traffic as a background for a melodramatic romance that is heightened by the presence aboard ship on its last cruise of the fragile and gently bred young woman Capt. Jim Lovett has married on his last visit to the States from the dark African coast. The play is pure fiction of a sort that will rivet the attention of any audience not averse to a considerable degree of brutality in its recreation.

The piece has been especially well cast. Supporting the costars are Elizabeth Allan, British actress, who fits quite nicely into the role of Nancy Marlowe, the girl who finds herself bound for the African slave coast when she thinks she is pointed toward Jamaica and the peaceful life of a vast plantation. Mickey Rooney, rapidly developing poise as the foremost all-around juvenile actor in Hollywood, cast as a resourceful cabin boy, takes his place among the stars of the picture by virtue of a histrionic skill that quite matches that of any of his adult associates. Then there are George Sanders, that contradictory English "heavy," who goes about his vicious schemes with a monocle in his eye; Jane Darwell, Joseph Schildkraut, as the African slave merchant; Arthur Hohl, Minna Gombell, Francis Ford, J. Farrell MacDonald, Holmes Herbert, Edwin Maxwell, Douglas Scott, the lad who has succeeded Freddie Bartholomew in "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry;" T. DeWitt Jennings, Dorothy Christy, Dewey Robinson and scores more.

If some of the sinister past performances these ladies and gentlemen have brought to the screen are recalled to mind, it will be seen with what ominous threat they are able to imbue the climacteric scenes of this vivid melodrama of mutiny and murder.

"Slave Ship," when it opens on the screen at Loew's Capitol tomorrow, will be found to furnish pretty strong dramatic meat—but definitely interesting, whether always palatable or not.

Following the practice of promoting from the ranks of his organization, Louis Bernheimer announces that when his new Newton Theater, at Twelfth and Newton streets northeast, opens its doors this evening at 7, the house will be under the management of Frederick Kraus. Like many others who have enjoyed similar recognition for meritorious service, Mr. Kraus began as an usher, working his way up through the ranks to the assistant managership of the Jesse Theater, another of the Bernheimer residential theaters. It is from that post that he is promoted to the managership of the Newton. James Helm will be chief of service.

In the considerable public reaction that has manifested itself at this desk as a result of the announcement of the abolition of second balcony season reservations at the National Theater next season, there are about an equal number of fors and againsts. The "againsts," naturally, are among those who have been consistent season subscribers to the second balcony seat locations. They feel they are being done an injury and all advance one argument in common—that they have supported the theater by their attendance every week, whereas, under the new arrangement, those who have not done so will be given an "edge" in the purchase of the seats they always have felt were theirs.

This argument, it seems to me, doesn't quite bear up. The entire subscription list, as has already been announced, has been transferred to a mailing list which will enable them to apply in advance for the seats they wish for any given attraction. If they avail themselves of this privilege, they will be no worse off than they were before.

Another argument is that the subscribers have taken the good with the bad and, by implication, have attended the National every week it has been open each season. They need not have done this. A season reservation, under the old plan, was canceled on the theater's books only after it had not been taken up for two weeks in succession. Under this rule, any subscriber could have retained his reservation and still only attended the National every other week, or a total of half the season.

Many of my correspondents are under the impression that because they did not cancel their bookings time after time, none of the other subscribers did. This was not the case. With a second balcony ostensibly sold out upon the opening of the box-office sale on Thursday, and many prospective cash purchasers of tickets turned away because there seemed to be no tickets for any performance during the ensuing week, cancellations have come in later—and so much later in many instances—that sale of the tickets was impossible. Those that were sold later created a peculiarly resentful frame of mind on the part of those who earlier had been told that there were no further tickets for sale.

Thus it comes out again that there are two sides to every question. In this connection, it might be well to point out that this department has "taken sides" with the National Theater only to the extent of feeling that the new arrangement will result in "the greatest good to the greatest number."

It is not beyond the bounds of possibility that we might be wrong. It has happened before.

Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, plans a novelty premiere for the opening of "The Toast of New York" on Wednesday night of next week. This event will be known as a "gilded age" opening and will depart violently from the common, or garden, variety of "Hollywood permeer." Details of the plan may not be divulged at this time, but there will be more of this business—much more—I am afraid, at a later date. If it works out according to schedule, it ought to afford an evening of more than ordinary picturesqueness and quaint charm.

Anxious Inquiry Note.

And what is the toast to be drunk in, Mr. Meakin? That 1919 Mumm's Extra Dry is pretty good.

Dancer Balloons Way to Favor!

While this might look like the beginning of a new-fangled stratosphere flight, it is, in reality, Eleanor Powell fighting her way through a mass of toy balloons in one of the most spectacular numbers in "Broadway Melody of 1938," in which she is costarred with Robert Taylor. This might seem like a bit of a handicap for any dancer, but Miss Powell is sufficiently proficient to cope with anything.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, July 28.—Settin' Around (United Artists—Goldwyn): Hollywood, according to Sam Goldwyn, is facing a financial crisis—and since every movie fan is affected, you will be interested in the ideas that he explained to me today. Production costs, he points out, have doubled. Star salaries have hit an all-time high with favorites commanding from $75,000 to $200,000 per picture. Sound has added 30 per cent to the cost of each picture and color is now adding another 5 per cent. Story costs have gone skyward. But—and here is the hub of the problem—theater admissions remain the same. Not only are theaters selling tickets at depression prices, but they sell million dollar productions as cheaply as "Class B" pictures.

Goldwyn, an idealist, if ever one lived, makes only "super" productions. The three pictures now in production under his banner are actually costing, respectively, $1,500,000, $1,600,000 and $2,000,000. "At current theater prices, I am lucky if I get back my investment," he says. "The only way I can cut my costs is to cheapen my product—and I will retire before I do that. Why should anyone expect to see one of my $2,000,000 pictures for the same admission fee that he pays to see a routine 'quickie' that was ground out for $100,000? The only solution is to set a price on each individual picture, according to its worth, and then let the public shop for its screen entertainment just as it does for its clothes and its automobiles."

It strikes me that is a fair solution and since Goldwyn tells me that every major producer agrees with him, I think it will be put into practice. What do you think? Are you willing to pay more to see a "Mutiny on The Bounty" than a "Charlie Chan at The Circus?" Sam Goldwyn is anxious to know your verdict.

Final scenes are being shot for the South Sea epic, "Hurricane," and I found the troupe working on a set so realistic that I had to pinch myself to realize I was still in Hollywood. The scene represented the atoll after the storm. A sand beach, surrounding a lagoon, was littered with debris — wrecked outriggers, fallen palms and driftwood. Encircling the entire set was a painted background of sea and sky, and on the beach huddled the weary survivors of the catastrophe. I strolled over to Mary Astor who sat out of camera range, dabbing her bare feet in the cool water like a 10-year-old school girl. "Are you the dignified Miss Astor?" I demanded. "No," she grinned, "I'm the very comfortable Miss Astor. For years I've been making Arctic pictures in the summer and swimming pictures in the winter. This is the first time I've ever hit the perfect combination. Go away — and let me enjoy myself in the old swimmin' hole!"

On the same set, I was introduced to Mrs. Flora Hayes—a full blooded Hawaiian matron who came to the mainland some months ago to attend a national convention of the P.-T. A. In Hollywood she met the director of "Hurricane," and before she could say "Jack Robinson," he had whisked her to the studio for a test and signed her to play one of the principal roles. "My only regret," she said, "is the time I wasted preparing a 200-page report of the P.-T. A convention. If my experience in California is any indication, I'll never have the chance to read it. I have gone to a dozen Parent-Teacher meetings here prepared to speak about school conditions in the islands—but when the ladies hear that I'm working in a picture, they refuse to let me talk about anything but the stars I've met."

Never saw a more beautiful set than the palace garden of Kublai Khan in "Marco Polo." Nor have I ever seen bigger men than have been collected to play the Mongol potentate's guard. They tried to hire real Chinese but couldn't find any tall enough, so they finally fell back on those old reliables, the Hollywood cowboys. The guardsmen must average 220 pounds of brawn each—and, after trying on one of the suits of armor that they have to wear 8 hours a day, I know why they need to be huskies. We weighed one of the breastplates and it tipped the scales at 21 pounds! Imagine wearing an outfit like that on the broiling desert location where most of "Marco Polo" will be filmed!

Show Girls Want Only Small Means

Over 200 show girls, appearing with Jack Benny in "Artists and Models," had an opportunity, during production of this feature, to tell the world a few things. Most of them emphasized "the boy friend."

This is the way one show girl, Dee La Nore, beautiful and brown-eyed, summed it up: "I think it's safe to say that nine out of ten of us want to meet and marry some nice chap who has a reasonably good job, a car and maybe a bungalow equipped with some of the new electrical gadgets for doing housework in a hurry."

'Dr. Syn' Finished.

Shooting on "Dr. Syn," the second of the season's George Arliss starring productions for Gaumont, has been completed, and the film has gone to the cutting room for final editing. The picture is an adaptation of the Russell Thorndyke novel of Kentish smugglers, of which more than a million copies have been sold. The supporting cast includes Margaret Lockwood, John Loder, Roy Emerton, Graham Moffatt and others.

The Washington Post Sports

This Morning

Slugging Roomies With the Nats

By Shirley Povich.

No less than downright amazing is the current hitting streak of Washington's Buddy Lewis, whose youth has earned him the sobriquets of Brighteyes and Junior. The kid third baseman has been a potent package in the Nats' six-game winning streak.

POVICH.

When he rapped out three hits yesterday against the White Sox—a single, double and triple in five appearances at bat—he brought his recent record to 15 hits in his last 20 times up there at the dish, as the ball players say. That, my friends, represents a batting average of .750.

At one point during the Nats' recent Western trip, young Lewis was hitting a dismal .269. The promise of his freshman year in the big leagues appeared to have been blasted. The lad, who hit an estimable .299 last season, was apparently the victim of the "second-year" test, which a whole slew of first-year brilliants have been unable to negotiate.

Bucky Harris was on the verge of benching him. Loung Lewis was pathetic in his efforts to cure his slump He started crouching up there at the plate until his shoulders were almost a parallel with his waistline. He was the mold of bad form—a batting style that he would have laughed at if anybody suggested last season that he would ever be hitting with that kind of a stance.

And then, suddenly, he began to get some flukey hits—infield dribblers and plunkers—over the infield. They were cheap hits, but still they were hits. Anyway, they apparently restored his confidence, because he started to stand up there in his old style and swing. And legitimate hits—line drive affairs—began to rattle off his bat. During the past week it has been a feat on the part of a pitcher to get Lewis out.

The .269 batting overage that he carried into the West has thrived on his recent showing. This morning beside his name is a very estimable .313, which stamps him as the club's third leading hitter.

And the only guys on the Washington team who boast a better batting average than Lewis are his roommate—Cecil Travis and Johnny Stone. But the fact that Travis is leading the Washington hitters, occasions no surprise. For Travis long has been acknowledged as the finest potential hitter on the team.

The ball players think he is a swell batter. "He could hit in the dark," they say by way of paying compliment to the fellow. Around the league Travis is recognized as no flash in the pan. That .369 batting average he is sporting is thoroughly becoming.

The first day Travis ever wore a big-league uniform he clipped Cleveland's pitching for five hits. During succeeding seasons he has become the problem child of both infielders and outfielders. He has reduced to pure guesswork all efforts to shade his hitting territory.

He always gets a piece of the ball, as the saying goes, more often than not hitting it sharply. Only one player in the American League is probably robbed of more hits than Travis—those line-drive clouts that unhappily find their way into an infielder's glove after the infielder has barely had his time to get his hands up in self-defense. That player is Charley Gehringer, of the Tigers.

Travis was the lone guy on the Nats who continued to hit consistently during the late lamented Western trip and he was robbed of hits on so many occasions that as he appeared at the plate correspondents in the press box actually wagered on which infielder would catch his line drive, if it were caught.

Never before has he figured among the league's leading hitters at this stage of the season, never hitting above .317 in fact, but Travis' challenge to Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig, of the Yankees, for the league batting crown is not belittled by his Washington teammates.

"He's worth a bet," Manager Bucky Harris was saying yesterday. "Anybody who meets the ball the way he does can keep up with any hitter in the league. Good pitching won't stop him, either. And left-handers don't bother Cece. He's a slap hitter, doesn't go for bad balls and he makes those guys pitch to him."

"Gehrig and DiMaggio will hit the ball farther than Cece—a whole lot farther—but in the averages a single counts as much as a triple or homer. Unless they change the rules about that, Travis has a good chance to win that $500 bucks they give to the leading hitter."

South American Boxers at Dallas

New York, July 28 (AP).—Seventeen boxing champions from Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil arrived on the steamer Western World today and prepared to leave at 8 o'clock (Eastern standard) tonight for Dallas and the international tournament to be held in connection with the Pan-American games August 12-13-14.

At Dallas the South Americans, who were attended by a big crew of trainers and handlers, will compete against a United States team composed of 1937 national A. A. U. champions and runners-up, and against a Cuban squad. Later the visitors will go to Chicago to compete against a Catholic Youth organization team.

Mel Tarpley Reaches Net Semifinals

By Jack Munhall.

Those victorious yesterday were Mel Tarpley, tall, well-built Tampa Floridian, whose play has been the tournament's sensation, who conquered Jack McLaughlin, stock and stubborn Pennsylvanian, 6—1, 6—4, and Joe Baker, tall, slender public parks star, who registered a mild upset, spilling Erwin Niemyer, fifth ranked player, by the same scores.

The winning pair thus find themselves in the round of four with Roy Stocklinski, seeded one, and Allie Ritzenberg, rated just behind. The semifinals will be played tomorrow with Tarpley engaging Stocklinski and Baker crossing racquets with the youngest of the tennis Ritzenberg brothers.

All-Around Game.

Trapley, unheralded in pretournament gossip, continued to display his excellent all-around game, and observers pronounced him improved even over the performance which sank Billy Contreras, last year's playground champion, in the upset which gained him recognition as a dark horse and which sent tennis enthusiasts into hasty research of his record.

Tarpley played a heady game often changing his pace and capitalized on repeated errors, especially service mistakes, on the part of the Pennsylvanian who like his conqueror showed obvious need of practice.

McLaughlin, showing one of the fastest serves in a tournament, had terrific power behind his drives but too often was long with his baseline placements and experienced great difficulty in controlling his cannonading service. On the other hand he exhibited a fine forehand and retrieving game and with a few more competitive matches under his belt will prove troublesome to all.

Extends Self.

At only one juncture did Tarpley have to extend himself. After winning the first set with ease he allowed the ever-improving Pennsylvanian to overcome a 3-1 deficit and deadlock the count at 4-4 all. Then on McLaughlin's service in the ninth game the handful of spectators were treated to a hectic game which saw the score teeter in first one's and then the other's favor until Tarpley finally broke through and won on the sixth deuce.

Baker, handicapped by a bad wrist which was bandaged, utilized his great height to utmost advantage in subduing his comparatively diminutive foe. His forehand drives kept Niemyer continually on the defensive and there was never a doubt to the ultimate decision.

Today the doubles will resume with the semifinals listed at 5 and 5:30 p. m., at Rock Creek. In the first match the only unseeded team but the upset victors over Fred Doyle and Joe Baker, No. 1 seeded combination of Ray Stocklinski and Harry March will engage Maurice Goubeau and Tarpley and in the nightcap the Ritzenberg fraternity of Allie and Hy face Bob Bradely and Harry Goldsmith.

Macks Drub Tribe Again, Win by 11-7

Three Run Rallies in 7th and 8th Innings Decide Issue.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 28.—The Athletics clubbed three Cleveland pitchers, including Bob Feller, for 17 hits today and defeated the Indians by 11 runs to 7. The victory was the second straight over the tribe.

Two rallies of three runs each in the seventh and eighth innings brought the Mackmen from the rear of a 6-to-5 count. Feller who went in with two out in the seventh, was solved for two singles, a walk and a run.

Wally Moses, Ace Parker, Jake Solters and Lyn Lary hit home runs in the course of the tussle.

Browns Lose To Bosox by 5-to-4 Margin

Two Runs in Ninth Decide Issue; Buck Newsom Winning Hurler.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 28.—Scoring two runs in the ninth inning, the Boston Red Sox came from behind today to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 5 to 4. Jimmy Foxx, heavyhitting Red Sox first baseman lashed out his twenty-fifth home run of the season in the sixth. Buck Newsom held the Browns to 8 hits, while the Red Sox nipped Hildebrand for 11.

Frank Shields and Allison Win In Sea Bright Tennis Tourney

By the Associated Press.

Sea Bright, N. J., July 28.—Frank X. Shields, handsome Californian, who is on vacation from the sound studios of Hollywood, followed three top-seeded players into the semifinals of the fiftieth annual Sea Bright Invitation Tournament today.

Bobby Riggs, youthful Los Angeles star; Willmer L. Allison, of Austin, Tex., former national champion, and Jiro Yamagishi, Japan's highest ranking singles expert, moved into the round of four with comparative ease, but Shields' exhibition held the attention of the gallery clustered around the Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club's center court.

Shields eliminated J. Gilbert Hall, the veteran New Yorker, in straight sets, 6—1, 8—6. The second set followed service until the thirteenth, when the towering Californian broke through to take the decisive game. He ended the battle in the fourteenth with a sizzling service ace.

Riggs defeated Frank D. Guernsay, jr., 20-year-old Rice Institute sophomore. Guernsay was aggressive, but tired in the second set, as Riggs posted a 6—4, 6—3 victory.

Yamagishi, who will meet Riggs in the semifinals tomorrow, disposed of Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, seventh-ranking player of the Southern Tennis Association, 6—2, 7—5.

The women's division, Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, the husky Polish champion, had a busy and successful day. Her terrific forehand drives crushed Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—2, in the morning quarter-finals. This afternoon Miss Jedrzejowska paired with Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, to gain the doubles final by defeating Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Patricia Henry, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 7—5.

The Polish girl was joined in the semifinals by blonde Alice Marble, of San Francisco, the defending champion, Mrs. Marjorie G. Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., and Miss Bundy. Miss Marble eliminated Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., 6—1, 4—6, 6—1.

Miss Bundy defeated Marilynn McRae, of Little Rock, Ark., 6—0, 9—7, while Mrs. Van Ryn posted a minor upset as she toppled Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., 11—9, 5—7, 6—4.

In tomorrow's men's singles, Riggs will face Yamagishi, and Allison will meet Shields. In the women's singles, Miss Marble will meet Mrs. Van Ryn and Miss Jedrzejowska will encounter Miss Bundy.

Men's Doubles, Quarter-Final Round.

Mixed Doubles—Second Round.

Mrs. Sylva Henrolin, France, and Robert Riggs, Los Angeles, defeated Miss Edith Moore, Montclair, and Frank D. Guernsay, jr., Orlando, 6—3, 6—3.

Miss Barbara Winslow, Los Angeles, and Chester Murphy, Chicago, defeated Miss Katherine Winthrop and William Robertson, Pasadena, 6—2, 6—3.

Miss Gracyn Wheeler, Santa Monica, and John McDiarmid, Chicago, defeated Mr. and Mrs. Sidney B. Wood, jr., 3—6, 6—4, 7—5.

Miss Peggy Kerr, Hollywood, and Lewis Wetherell, Los Angeles, defeated Miss Jane Stanton, Los Angeles, and J. Gilbert Hall, New York, 6—3, 6—1.

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus and Gregory S. Mangin, New York, defeated Miss Anne Page, Philadelphia, and Martin Buxby, Miami, 6—3, 6—4.

Mme. J. Jedrzejowska, Poland, and Jiro Yamagishi, Japan, defeated Miss Olga Ridgefield, Conn., and Alfred Jarvis, Tenafly, 6—2, 6—2.

Miss Hope Knowles, Philadelphia, and Gilbert Hunt, Washington, defeated Miss Florence Leboutillier, Westbury, N. Y., and Elwood Cooke, Portland, Oreg., 6—4, 5—7, 6—4.

Dodgers Lose Second in Row To Chicago, 7-5

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 28.—The Cubs made it two in a row over the Brooklyn Dodgers today and maintained their National League race by scoring a 7-to-5 victory in the second game of the series. Frank Demaree hit a homer for the Cubs.

Larry French held the Dodgers to two hits the first five innings and was belted out under a four-run barrage in the sixth, after which Pappey Charley Root took over and stopped the Dodgers the rest of the way.

The Cubs thereby were assured of holding their three-game lead in the National League, even if the Giants should down the Cardinals.

Buddy Lewis Leads Assault on Kennedy

Makes Three of Nats' 16 Hits as Five Chicago Misplays Spell Sox's Doom; Berger Hits Homer With One on Base.

By Shirley Povich.

Washington's sixth straight victory was won yesterday by the Chicago White Sox, who championed the Nats' cause with five juicy errors and left 5,000 fans at Griffith Stadium to wonder whether the Chicago Club was friend or foe.

The Sox certainly came through for the Nats. Whenever the Washingtons needed a run or two the Sox came through with a hideous piece of fielding and eased the tension. The upshot of it all was a 11-8 triumph for the Nats, thanks to a half-dozen gift runs.

But the Washington athletes were in there walloping the ball with great vigor at the same time to achieve their longest winning streak in three seasons. They piled base hits on top of the Chicago misplays and had 16 blows to show for their efforts against Vernon Kennedy, the Chicago right-hander who somehow remained upright throughout the proceedings.

Nats' Pitching Spotty.

And it was well that the Nats were hitting the ball and the Sox were in a suicidal mood, because the Washington pitching was no great shucks. Ed Linke had all but wasted a 7-3 lead when Manager Bucky Harris happily got him out of there at the end of the fifth inning, and Monte Weaver was having a deal of trouble with the Sox in the ninth when Syd Cohen finally got the side out for him.

For Weaver, though, there was some excuse. The skinny fellow got his pitching hand in the way of two line drives off the bats of Luke Sewell and Zeke Bonura and he could hardly get a spin on the ball after that.

Kennedy struck out a pair of Nats in the first inning, but don't jump to conclusions. Between those strikeouts he was having a sad time of it. Because Buddy Lewis whaled a two-bagger to left, Cecil Travis smacked a two-bagger to left center and Al Simmons rammed a two-bagger to center. And when Joe Kuhel and Buddy Myer followed with a pair of singles, the Nats had a 3-0 lead.

Sox Reduce Lead.

The Sox cut that lead to 3-1 in the third when Mel Almada dropped Walker's long fly after a terrific sprint, but Bozie Berger gave that run right back to the Nats when, with plenty of time, he pulled Zeke Bonura off the bag with a throw to first and Al Simmons was safe. Eventually Simmons scored from third because Appling and Radcliffe couldn't get their bearings on a short fly by Myer, Simmons scoring when the collision of the two Sox knocked Appling out of throwing position.

Berger, who was having a very odd day of it out there, got two runs back for the Sox in the fourth when he smacked a home run into the center-field seats with Luke Sewell on base to reduce the Nats' margin to 4-3.

And then, in the same inning, Berger gave the Nats back three runs because he failed to hold Pitcher Kennedy's throw to third base on a bunt. Thus reprieved, the Nats scored the runs on Johnny Stone's single which drove in a pair, and Simmons' long fly.

That made it 7 to 3 and the Sox cut those figures to 7 to 5 in the fifth when Walker singled, Bonura doubled to left and Radcliff singled. And in the sixth they cut it to 7 to 6 when Weaver caught the spirit of the error-making and threw the ball past Kuhel to give the Sox another run.

But the Sox evidently couldn't stand the tension of a close score. Anyway, Zeke Bonura fumbled a tame grounder off Lewis' bat in the Nats' half of the sixth and inspired a two-run rally that upped Washington's margin to 9 to 6.

And as if that weren't enough, Luke Appling fumbled two successive ground balls in the seventh and Buddy Lewis, with his fourth hit of the day—a two-bagger to left, drove a pair of runs home to make it 11 to 6.

At that, though, Weaver had to have help in the ninth. He pitched a pair of walks and a pair of singles and the Sox had one run over with the bases still full and only one out before Syd Cohen came in and retired the next two hitters just like that.

Auker Halts Yanks, Wins 8-1 Victory

Tigers Pound El Gomez and Hadley; Pete Fox Hits a Home Run.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 28.—Elden Auker handed the Yankees their most humiliating defeat of the year today, handcuffing them with two hits as he pitched the Detroit Tigers to an 8-to-1 victory.

A single by Joe DiMaggio in the first, and another by Red Rolfe in the third, were the only safe blows the muffled murderers' row was able to collect off the big right-hander. From the third inning on, Auker pitched no-hit, no-run ball.

At the same time, the Tigers toyed with Shaky Yankee pitching as demonstrated by Lefty Gomez and Bump Hadley, clubbed out 15 hits, and were never in danger after a three-run rally in the fourth put the game on ice.

Gomez's first pitch in the first inning was belted out of the lot by Pete Fox for a homer. After that it was just a breeze. Every Detroiter hit safely at least once. Charley Gehringer, with three singles, and Gerry Walker, with a double and two singles, led the attack. Chet Laabs, the centerfield rookie, drove in four runs with a triple and single.

Large Squad Off To P.G.A. Tourney

The largest Middle Atlantic professional delegation ever to play in its own championship, the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., will leave today for the Chamberlin Country Club in Old Point Comfort, Va., scene of the event Saturday and Sunday.

A majority of the local mentors will arrive at the Old Dominion resort tomorrow. The Baltimore contingent will leave tonight on the Old Bay line. Ralph Beach, one of the Mound City favorites, has been on the scene since last Monday.

Errie Ball and Al Houghton, the host pro, have played several practice rounds over the course the past week and are favored among the host State entries.

Sahri II Wins Hannah Dustin Handicap Race

Falls One-Fifth Second Short of Time Supply's Track Record.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 28.—Reserved off the pace most of the way, C. Shockley's Sahri II today qualified handsomely for the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap by coming from behind to win the Hannah Dustin Handicap, mile and one sixteenth feature for fillies and mares at Suffolk Downs, by two lengths over the Greentree Stable's Drowsy to pay $4.80.

The Chilean importation was carrying top weight of 120 pounds and was clocked in 1:43.4, one-fifth of a second off the track record, established by Time Supply while carrying 119 pounds August 3, 1935.

In third place five lengths off Drowsy was the Tall Tree Stable's Navarre while in fourth place was Joe Brook's Boston Mary. Drowsy paid $2.60 to place, while Navarre brought $2.80.

Jockey Villena hit his mount at the 70-yard pole and she drew away to win by a 2-length margin in near-record time. She did not have to finish too strenuously and no doubt could have at least equaled the record had she been asked the question.

It was her third victory in four starts in this country. The $1,845 that was her end of the purse brought her earnings to $3,475 for the year.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAROGAN, $5.80, $4.00, $2.80; CLEAN SPORT, $3.00, $4.80; CHARMED EYES, $4.00.

STAROGAN had speed from the start opening up daylight over her closest pursuer in the opening three-sixteenths and rated along in front was never seriously threatened. CLEAN SPORT worked his way up steadily and finished with good energy through the stretch run. CHARMED EYES, well placed early, was unable to reach the leader, dropped back midway on the turn and came willingly in the last furlong to beat HAPPY AND GAY for third.

SECOND RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:02½. Winner, L. J. Sandrock's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOULD DARE, $14.00, $7.00, $5.40; CANDIMATE, $8.80, $4.80; BUSY PRINCE, $3.00.

WOULD DARE was slow to settle into his best stride, worked his way up on the outside leaving the backstretch, came wide into the stretch and wearing down the leaders was drawing out at the finish. CANDIMATE was prominently placed and under reserve early came willingly in the drive, although unable to keep pace with the winner. BUSY PRINCE worked his way up steadily and finished with good energy in the closing drive.

DAILY DOUBLE, STAROGAN AND WOULD DARE, PAID $97.40.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Waltham Purse; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:33. Off 3:42. Winner, P. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEVIL'S MATE, $6.40, $4.40, $3.40; ROYAL RHAPSODY, $4.80, $4.00; BOB C., $5.80.

DEVIL'S MATE took command at once, drew clear in the opening three-sixteenths, opened up a commanding advantage and was bearing out slightly the last furlong, although increasing her advantage with every stride. ROYAL RHAPSODY, unruly at the post, unseated her rider. She went into contention with a rush on the outside nearing the far turn, continued to race gamely and although no match for the winner, held on well to the end. BOB C., was taken up sharply when in close quarters entering the turn, recovered gamely and was going stoutly on the inside through the stretch run.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. The Pelsway Purse; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:16. Off 4:20. Winner, Mrs. P. A. Shea's b. c. (3), by Display—Bewildered. Trained by Richard Pollard. Value to winner, $675; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45.

†Dead heat. ‡Disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOLLUSCHICKIE, $27.00, $10.00, $4.60; PANTHER CREEK (dead heat), $3.60, $2.60; WINGSPREAD (dead heat, disqualified); DUNADE, $3.00.

HOLLUSCHICKIE was moved up to the first six furlongs, responded gamely to pressure in the closing quarter mile and closing with a rush through the stretch, was along in the last 30 yards. PANTHER CREEK had speed from the start, was bothered by WINGSPREAD repeatedly and lasted to hold him to a dead heat. WINGSPREAD, reserved early, moved up gamely, bumped the pacemaker when going to the front for which he was disqualified after finishing in a dead heat for the place. DUNADE, well placed, was unable to improve his position in the closing drive.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2,500 added. The Hannah Dustin Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:54. Off 4:56. Winner, C. Shockley's ch. m. (6), by Tagore—Mary Garden. Trained by J. Cuenas. Net value to winner, $1,845; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $125. Time, 1:43 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAHRI II, $4.80, $2.80, $2.40; DROWSY, $2.60, $2.20; NAVARRE, $2.80.

SAHRI II, confidently ridden, moved up steadily in the run down the backstretch while under steadying reserve, was not called upon for her best until straightening out in the stretch and readily wore down DROWSY to draw out in the last sixteenth. DROWSY, under stout restraint while following the early pace, went into a good lead when called upon and although holding on willingly, was unable to go along with the winner when challenged. NAVARRE, a trailer until nearing the far turn, moved up with a rush, although unable to close any appreciable amount of ground in the last five-sixteenths.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:26. Off 5:28½. Winner, Mrs. C. P. Lindner's br. c. (4), by Saxon—Wave Top. Trained by C. P. Lindner. Value to winner, $675; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:11 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOP TAX, $21.20, $9.00, $5.20; ROUGH PARTY, $4.60, $3.20; MIXWELL, $4.60.

TOP TAX was prominently placed from the start, moved up on the outside to take a good lead after rounding the far turn, continued to deliver good speed and was never seriously threatened. ROUGH PARTY, well placed and restrained early, finished with good courage through the stretch run. MIXWELL, reserved until leaving the backstretch, moved up boldly, made a game try to reach the leader, but was not good enough and was unable to close any ground in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 6:01. Off 6:02. Winner, H. Bieber's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAR STRIPES, $10.00, $5.60, $3.60; MAKEIT, $6.40, $3.60; PRETTY PAL, $3.20.

WAR STRIPES was taken under steadying restraint for the first five furlongs, moved up stoutly on the outside during the closing quarter mile and overhauled PRETTY PAL for the lead after passing the furlong pole, drawing clear at the end. MAKEIT, well placed and restrained early, moved up willingly when called upon and continued willingly to the end, although unable to withstand the bid of the winner. PRETTY PAL moved into a good lead in the opening quarter mile, was steadied along in front, weakening in the last furlong, although never threatened for third.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 6:36. Off 6:40. Winner, R. L. Hall's b. f. LITTLE BANNER, a trailer for most of the trip, came with a rush on the extreme outside through the stretch, getting up in the last strides to wear down AUREATE. The latter, well placed and slightly restrained early, wore down WINTER SPORT for the lead nearing the finish. WINTER SPORT, under straint following the pace, went to the front in the stretch and fought it out gamely to the end.

Ranger Scores 13th Victory in Practice Race

By the Associated Press.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., July 28. Harold S. Vanderbilt's undefeated Ranger scored her thirteenth victory today, three days before she will meet T. O. M. Sopwith's second British challenger for the America's Cup, Endeavour II.

Ranger had as her opponents the two unsuccessful aspirants for the defense nomination, Gerard B. Lambert's Yankee and Chandler Hovey's Rainbow, and Sopwith's first Endeavour, with which he failed to lift the trophy in 1934.

Ranger finished a 37-mile run from Mattapoisett to Vineyard Haven more than 6 minutes ahead of Yankee, approximately 8 minutes ahead of Rainbow and more than 9 minutes before Endeavour.

The defender, only undefeated class J sloop in the world and the largest, took the lead virtually from the start, which was made in a light northwesterly breeze. Had it held, the sloops would have been able to reach out Buzzards Bay, to the Vineyard lightship, but a shift to southwesterly soon converted the first leg into a beat. Ranger steadily widened her lead and at the lightship, approximately 16 miles from the start, she led Yankee by 6 minutes and 45 seconds.

The contest early developed into a battle between Yankee and Rainbow for second place, and Rainbow rounded the lightship in third position only 20 seconds.

Endeavour trailed Rainbow by 4 minutes and 20 seconds. Vanderbilt was Rainbow's skipper three years ago when she vanquished Endeavour.

Spinnakers were broken out for the run up Vineyard Sound before a freshening breeze, and as a making breeze always favors the laggards on such a point of sailing, it was not surprising Ranger's lead was reduced slightly.

By stepping outside the record, Ranger's victory today could be counted her sixteenth, for she also won three informal encounters off Newport with Yankee, Rainbow and Endeavour, which were not on the schedule.

The Defender's showing today was increasingly impressive considering Vanderbilt, with the international classic only three days away, took no chances of accident. Ranger's best canvas remained safely stowed, some of it on his power yacht Vara, which escorted her. Mrs. Vanderbilt, in flannel trousers, sailed with her husband and shared in his delight over Ranger's unbroken string of victories.

Reds Wallop Boston, Win 6-1 Decision

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 28.—Ray "Peaches" Davis pitched the Cincinnati Reds today to their second consecutive victory over the Boston Bees, 6 to 1.

The Bees' single run came on one of two walks Davis issued, a double by Gene Moore—one of four straight he got today—and an error.

A double by Scarsella, Hafey's single and a wild pitch gave the Reds their first tally. They scored twice in the fourth inning on Riggs' single and Kampouris' fourteenth home run of the season.

Scarsella's second double and Hafey's second single scoring him, followed by V. Davis' single, drove Lanning to the showers in the fifth. Riggs greeted Gabler with a single, scoring Hafey, and V. Davis scored on an infield out.

Public Links Players Given Big Send-off

Rep. Havenner, Brown Address Meeting at East Potomac.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Washington payed its national public links stars tribute at East Potomac last night as a gathering of some 1,000 links enthusiasts joined Master of Ceremonies Gordon Hittenmark and a distinguished group in giving the quartet of Harding Cup participants a send-off to the national play in San Francisco, starting August 9.

Claude Rippy, city champion and team captain; Andrew Oliveri, runnerup, Bobby Burton, several time qualifier, and Jimmy Gipe, a freshman to the group, received the medals emblematic of making the team, and the cup.

The program, fostered by Dave Herman, local representative of the U. S. G. A. public links committee, included among its speakers Maj. Ernest Brown superintendent of police; Congressman Frank Havenner, of San Francisco, and S. G. Loeffler, municipal links concessionaire, and the man who is responsible for sending the players to the title competition.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of public parks, followed Herman and Hittenmark to the speakers' rostrum, and wished the participants success in the event, as did Maj. Brown.

Congressman Havenner combined a little Chamber of Commerce talk for the City of the Golden Gate with a tribute to the local golfers and presented the team with a letter of introduction to the Mayor of San Francisco.

Loeffler, backer of the team again, in the interest of local public links golf, asked the boys to bring the Harding Cup, the team trophy, and the individual crown back to the city.

The four participants leave Sunday night on the cross-country trek, and will arrive several days in advance of the tourney to practice over the Harding Memorial course layout.

Frank T. Gartside, assistant superintendent of public parks, joined his colleagues in wishing Rippy and his partners a victory. Rippy, three-time local municipal champion, was co-medalist and runnerup last year at Long Island.

Hoosier Gridmen Mostly Yearlings

Bloomington, Ind., July 28 (AP).—Almost half of the prospective 1937 Indiana University football squad will be sophomores.

Coach A. N. (Bo) McMillin said today he expects a squad of 44 players—one of the smallest in the Big Ten—and of that number 21 will be sophomores.

Thirteen "I" wearers were to form the nucleus of a team that must meet Centre, Minnesota, Illinois, Cincinnati, Nebraska, Ohio State, Iowa and Purdue.

Dusek, Hader Meet Tonight In Mat Battle

Ernie is expected to receive a "booing" welcome when he steps onto the padded canvas to grunt with Hader, for not one of the Duseks who comprise the famous Nebraska "riot squad" is exempt from ringside cat calls and jeers.

It is no secret that Ernie is the most colorful, the most ferocious and best liked of the four Dusek brothers, and his bout with the hard-boiled toughie from the Ozark Mountains is expected to lure perhaps the largest crowd of the outdoor season to Mr. C. C. Griffith's ball orchard.

Dusek's Second Visit.

This will be Dusek's second appearance this season. The latter part of May the captain of the "riot squad" wrestled Wee Willie Davis on the same card his two brothers, Joe and Rudy, appeared, and won easily from the big Virginian.

Hader is quite a showman, and whereas Ernie would not be satisfied with a preliminary role, Jack would. Hader has missed appearing on a local card but once in the last three months, proving that he is an exceptionally desirous character in the rassle ring.

Lenihan Meets Sledge.

That semiwindup between George Lenihan, the former Boston College man, and Bill Sledge, the former all-around Texas College athlete, promises to buzz with action. It is a match put on by special request and will have a 45-minute time limit tagged to it. Lenihan twice has incited ringside riots.

Abie Coleman, comical Jewish ace, groans away at Ralph Garibaldi, younger brother of Gino; Reb Russell, for three straight weeks a headliner at the Stadium, meets Jack Kennedy, of Texas, and Ed Meske, the Akron Adonis, will defend his good looks against George Kondyles, said to be Jeam Londos in disguise.

First bout starts at 8:30.

Addisons Win Two.

The Addison Chevrolet nine yesterday captured a doubleheader, defeating Clarendon B. C., 9-0, in the first clash and then subduing Georgetown B. C., 6-2.

Lou Gevinson Ready for All, Manager Says

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Somewhat disturbed, putting it mildly, by rumors that his pride and joy, Lou Gevinson, shouldn't be permitted in the same ring with Joey Archibald, as he will be, come Monday night, Mr. Mathew Twomey descended on the sports department last night, red in the face and ready to explode this theory.

He took the great northern route. By this system an amateur with one fight under his belt can be made a world champion in no time at all—or within no more than 60 pages of ye olde record booke. You merely draw with somebody, and then check up on his record, before—or after. But Mr. Twomey seems to have erected one of those airtight cases for his boy, which he readily admits.

In brief, Gevinson kayoed Al Schaeffer in four heats his first time out as a pro, and fractured his jaw doing it. Schaeffer whipped Doug Sweatnam, who drew with Jackie Carter. Jackie went out and worried Petey Sarron for 30 minutes, at Youngstown, Ohio, which, to Twomey's way of adding, makes Gevinson ready to knock Pete's block off.

Kayoes Whitler.

Lou knocked out Benny Whitler in the first round of their bout. Lou's second, and there was a great din about Whitler's tank ability. His nose dive that night, critics said, would have won first prize in any A. A. U. meet. But, Mr. Twomey points out, Whitler previously was knocked out by a "world champeen," Bat Battalino, in two rounds. Now, why make a green, uncouth youngster look better than the "Bat?"

In his third appearance Gevinson won the nod over Joey Temes, who sprang a major upset by defeating Roger Bernard. Bernard, it must be noted, is the only man, aside from Jimmy McLarnin, holding a decision over Barney Ross.

Twomey's southpaw socker dropped his fourth bout—remember how the fans called for Matt's scalp for rushing the juvenile along too fast—a bitter battle with Johnny Pena. Later, in his fifth start, he flattened the same Pena in the seventh. This (and Twomey has a century note to back up his assertion) was Pena's first knockout. When Lou floored him twice in the first engagement for nine counts, it marked the first time John ever hit the deck.

Pena Comes Back.

Now, for the sake of the record, Pena, supposedly washed up and an old man at 25, later drew with Bernie Freidkin, and Pete Scalzo, in their home rings. Their managers, Twomey claims, would have no paris of Pena until Gevinson cold-cocked him. That, they supposed, was his finish, for Lou's name is no household word in Gotham. Matt agrees that he had no business matching his boy with Pena—by the accepted managerial code, but knew his boy could take him.

Pena, adding to the record, fought Fidel LaBarba, Midget Wolgast, Tommy Paul and Freddie Miller, all world champions at one time or another, and had all on the floor. He defeated Miller in a nontitle fight just four months before Freddy lost his crown to Sarron. Fighting Pena twice, with the above results, Twomey contends, proves Lou can handle himself with the best of them.

Irish Johnny Dean, who meets Al Dunbar in the semifinal Monday, has challenged Henry Armstrong. Lou Ambers and any other good boys in their class. Johnny won 33 of his last 35 starts, lost one and drew in the other. He lost an unpopular verdict to Chino Alvarez, a tough hombre.

Johnny Campo, out of New Haven, tangles with Tony Lopez in an eight-rounder, added last night.

Pirates Take 6-4 Decision From Phillies

Pound Five Hurlers in Chaulking Up Second Win of Series.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 28.—The Pirates pounced on Claude Passeau and four other Philadelphia pitchers today to take the second of their three-game series, 6 to 4.

Big Jim Weaver started for the Pirates, but weakened in the seventh and Mace Brown relieved him. Young homered in the fourth, bringing Brubaker in ahead of him. Paul Warner hit safely three times in that many times at bat.

Wheat Shorts Scramble for July Delivery

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 28.—In frantic trading at the last today, traders short of wheat to fill immediate contract requirements bid up July delivery here 4¼ cents a bushel. Considerable buying of all wheat futures today was based on war advices from the far East, especially an authoritative assertion that actual hostilities will be on a major scale, and will encompass the whole of China. A majority of wheat handlers, however, indicated that there had been relatively little new export business in North American wheat today, and that for the time being Europeans were refusing to follow price upturns.

At the close, wheat in Chicago was exactly unchanged to 4¼ cents higher, July $1.24 to 1.26¾, September $1.18⅜@1.18½, December $1.20⅛@1.20¾; corn 2⅜ off to ¼ up; July 1.00¼@½, September 97½@⅝, December 71⅞@72; oats at ⅜ decline to ⅛ advance, September 30½, and rye varying from 3 cents setback to ⅞ gain. Provisions results ranged from 12 cents decline to 17 cents bulge.

Scrap Raised $1 To $21.50 Per Ton

New York, July 28 (AP).—Dow-Jones & Co., in a dispatch today from Pittsburgh, said No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap sold at $21.50 a ton, an advance of $1 a ton over the last previous transaction. The new quotation is $21 to $21.50 a ton, a new high on the current rise in steel scrap prices.

A month ago, the price was $18 to $18.50. A decided scarcity of heavy steel scrap continues and well-informed quarters predict higher prices, perhaps within a week, the dispatch said.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Drift Lower in Dull Trading as Favorable News Is Ignored; U. S. Bonds Firm.

New York, July 28.—Stocks worried through a dull session with prices generally lower, mostly by fractions, and with sales volume rising to around 850,000 shares. Most stocks sold at their poorest prices in the last hour. Bonds also were dull. September wheat rose a quarter of a cent to 118½ cents.

Although the stock market continued under the pressure of moderate profit-taking, the midweek statistical evidence gave no new cause for bearishness. The quarterly report of the United States Steel Corporation gave a hint of what industry might do if unhampered by strikes, and the General Motors statement showed how profits are being kept down where strikes occur, and without any compensating advantage for labor. Considered with numerous other corporations information covering the experience of the past six months, it is becoming clearer that operating costs are rising faster than improved efficiency can overcome them. Corporation profits for second quarter were higher than a year ago but the rate of gain was distinctly less than it was in first quarter.

What will happen when higher prices become more general is giving speculative and investment markets a little worry, and the anxiety is not lessened by the efforts in Congress to rush through the Black-Connery measure, which is designed further to restrict production and raise costs. With all the obstacles in sight the Administration apparently is cheerful over the outlook. Secretary Roper predicted that the "outlook for business and industrial activity this fall was unusually favorable." On one point agreement can be found here in responsible quarters, namely, expanding commercial business at the banks. Secretary Roper finds the Chicago banks are looking for increased business, because of the crops, and loan inquiry in this district is rising.

U. S. Steel.

Common share earnings of United States Steel Corporation for second quarter came within a cent or two of the figure printed frequently in recent comment. Steel common and the preferred opened a little lower and dragged for a time. Perhaps some persons had hoped that profits would prove to have been bigger than anticipated, and also some hope was entertained that a dividend might be started on the common. Liquidation of the remainder of the preferred stock's accumulations was taken for granted. Granted that the market had been given a good hint as to what the profits would be, the question might well be raised as to why they were not higher. The common stock earned $1 a share more in second quarter than in first quarter, but the operating rate in second quarter was higher. Perhaps some Steel stockholders who had approved Chairman Taylor's settlement with the C. I. O. had looked for a veritable harvest of profits in a period during which the recalcitrant steel companies were writhing in strikes.

New Financing.

The third quarter has gone far enough and the general situation looks reassuring enough to suggest that in the last half of the year Steel is almost certain to earn at least two or three dollars more for the common. That will insure a good, hefty dividend payment before the end of the year, under the penalty tax, and perhaps make possible the sale of additional common shares for replenishment of working capital. Just the same a certain amount of whispering can be heard in dark Wall Street corners. The subject is whether it is true that Steel's bargain with the C. I. O. involved a higher wage scale than that which the independents will have to pay; whether if the same terms were guaranteed, Steel might either have to cut wages to the independents' level or operate on a higher cost basis; finally, whether a large amount of "good will" business now will be swung to the independents for their courage in resisting the demands of the Lewis organization. One answer probably is that Steel has enough leeway to overcome moderate increases in costs. It always has been able to make steel cheaper than its rivals, and as an offset to diversion of orders because of peak, the Steel Corporation can do a bit of order swinging itself, in one way or another, because of its connections and friendly relations here and there.

Steel Dividends.

Some persons close to U. S. Steel's affairs think it doubtful that third quarter profits will be as good as they were in second quarter. They also predict that the first common dividend will be voted at the October meeting, and that it will be moderate, with another to follow before the end of the year to take care of the tax on undistributed profits.

General Motors.

This time the General Motors quarterly profits account is less a report to stockholders on finance and operations than it is an appeal to the public on labor problems. Undoubtedly General Motors, after stubbornly resisting the C. I. O. and finally giving in, has had a bad deal. It has made a settlement which it disliked and then has had to pay the costs of strikes just the same. Profits accordingly in the second quarter fell below those for the same period of last year, and the management says motor prices must go up to cover higher costs. An all-round rise in motor prices on the autumn models looks certain. How the public will take them can only be guessed. Public purchasing has increased and probably is still on the rise, but the nemesis of rising living costs is pounding close behind. As for General Motors, the chief element of doubt at present is whether a new contract will be made with the C. I. O., what the terms likely will be, and in case dealings are broken off, how severe a strike will follow. Neither the General Motors management nor industry in general has quite the same feeling of helplessness toward the C. I. O. that they had last spring.

Freight Train Law.

In Wall Street railroad centers the passage by the Senate of the McCarran act to limit freight train lengths to seventy cars is causing no great worry. One banking firm with numerous railroad connections said they felt no anxiety because as yet no railroad executive had called them for advice or consolation. For one thing, the bill is said to apply only to trains of loaded cars and larger train lengths than 70 cars for freight movement are not common these days. Just the same, the principle is bad, it will be costly for at least some roads, and the mere fact that some railroad presidents are inclined to continue their recumbent positions means nothing more than that some of them are as deep as ever in the mire of defeatism.

Deere & Co. Plan Increase in Common

Moline, Ill., July 28 (AP).—Directors of Deere & Co., implement manufacturers, have voted to propose an increase of common stock from 1,250,000 shares of no par value to 5,000,000 shares of no par value. The board voted to pay all dividend arrears amounting to $1 a share on the preferred stock. The regular quarterly dividend of 35 cents on the preferred stock also was declared. In addition, a dividend of $1 a share on the common stock was declared, the first dividend on the common since July 18, 1931. All dividends are payable September 1 to stock of record August 14.

Steel Industry Turns Up From Summer Low

Demand for Farm Equipment Develops at Home and Abroad.

New York, July 28.—"Enough spotty improvement has occurred to convince the steel trade that the bottom of the midsummer recession has been reached," says Iron Age in its weekly summary today, which adds:

"There has been no pronounced reversal of the recent downward trend in new business, except in the Chicago district, where the first influences of abundant farm crops at high prices are more in evidence than in areas farther east.

"The activity in farm equipment industries is outstanding. Not only is business from American farms far above the average, but there is also a good demand from abroad for farm machinery, especially tractor drawn. There is a broad reflection of the farm situation in tin plate and cans. Can makers are shipping out cans as fast as they make them, with indications that they will need all the tin plate that the mills can produce to the end of the year. The automobile industry is not yet buying heavily for 1938 models, but additional steel business from that source is expected within a few weeks. In general the demand for steel, other than that covered by contract commitments, is light but not unusually so for this time of the year.

"Fabricated structural steel lettings, in small volume for some weeks, have risen this week to more than 22,000 tons, including 9,000 tons for a hospital in New Orleans and 3,000 tons for the New York-Queens tunnel. New projects of 18,000 tons include 4,700 tons for an international bridge at Port Huron, Mich., 3,500 tons for a Federal building in Kansas City and 2,500 tons for an upper level on the Henry Hudson Bridge, New York.

National Steel Corp. Doubles Net Profit

Pittsburgh, July 28.—National Steel Corporation reports net income, after all charges except provision for Federal surtax on undistributed profits, for the quarter ended June 30, 1937, of $6,013,076.88, equal to $2.77 per share on 2,167,777 outstanding shares of capital stock. These earnings compare with net income in the same quarter of 1936 of $2,805,570.10, equal to $1.30 per share on 2,156,977 shares then outstanding.

Net profit for the half-year ended June 30, 1937, is $11,708,896.12, equal to $5.40 per share, which compares with $5,182,714.79, equal to $2.40 per share, for the first half of 1936.

Extra and Higher Dividends Voted

New York, July 28 (AP).—Directors of Remington Rand, Inc., office equipment makers, today declared an interim dividend of 35 cents on the common stock, and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.12½ on the 4½ per cent preferred, both payable October 1 to stock of record September 9. On July 1, the company paid an interim common dividend of 25 cents.

Otis Elevator.

Otis Elevator Co. announced today a dividend of 40 cents on the common stock, payable September 20 to stock of record August 31. Previous payment was 25 cents on June 21.

Wesson Oil.

Wesson Oil & Snowdrift Co. announced an extra dividend on the common stock today, the amount to be determined later, and the regular quarterly dividend of 12½ cents on the common and $1 on the preferred, all payable August 25 to stock of record August 14.

Standard Cap and Seal.

Directors of Standard Cap & Seal Corporation have declared an extra dividend of 20 cents per share on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents per share on the common stock and the regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents per share on the convertible preference stock. All dividends are payable September 1 to stockholders of record August 14.

Allegheny Steel.

Directors of Allegheny Steel Co. have declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the preferred stock, payable September 1 to holders of record August 18. The directors also declared a dividend of 40 cents a share on the common stock, payable September 16 to holders of record September 1.

Profits Tax Seen As Seed of Disaster

New York, July 28 (AP).—E. J. Cornish, chairman of the board of the National Lead Co., today criticised the undistributed profits tax, declaring it might lead to an "epidemic" of corporate failures.

"If it influences all corporations in the United States to declare out everything they have in dividends instead of growing along the lines of their first growth," said Cornish, "you are very likely to see at some time an epidemic of failures in the United States that would be terrific."

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Broker Pleads Guilty To Charges by SEC

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that H. H. Hoffman has been arrested and has pleaded guilty in Fort Worth, Tex., to charges of violating the securities act. Hoffman waived preliminary hearing and was released under $1,500 bond.

The Government alleged that the defendant from October, 1935, to May, 1937, offered securities aggregating over $90,000 in certain so-called drilling trusts, and misrepresented in several particulars as to the prospects for finding oil.

Oil Magnate's Rites Today In Baltimore

Funeral services for Louis Blaustein, Russian miller's son who arrived in New York with 36 cents and acquired a fortune selling oil and gasoline, will be held this morning at his home in Baltimore.

The 69-year-old executive died Tuesday in Atlantic City, where he was vacationing. He had many friends in Washington, where he had extensive business holdings.

He was founder and former president of the American Oil Co., for which 70 Lord Baltimore filling stations are a chief retail outlet in the District of Columbia. At the time of his death, he and his son, Jacob, controlled about 30 per cent of the stock of the Pan-American Petroleum Transport Co. This alone was valued at between $11,000,000 and $12,000,000.

Mr. Blaustein came to America in 1884, at the age of 16, to escape service in the army of the Czar. He joined relatives in Philadelphia and later started in the general merchandising business in Pottstown, Pa.

He came to Baltimore in 1891 and opened a grocery, a venture which illness forced him to relinquish. For a time he was employed by a small coal jobber and then was salesman for a building concern, selling oil as a side line.

It was not until 1910 that his luck turned and he was able to lay the foundation for the business that earned him millions. In that year he borrowed money with which to buy a horse and wagon, and began to peddle gasoline through the streets of Baltimore.

This was the beginning of the American Oil Company, the name he had printed on the side of his wagon. His office was a livery stable. He developed one of he first high test motor fuels and produced one of the first gasoline pumps of the visible type. He also introduced the first company-owned filling station.

In 1933 he was made president of Pan-American and chairman of the board of American Oil, his son becoming president of the latter and executive vice president of the former. In March of this year both father and son resigned these posts, but retained their stock and filed a suit now pending against Standard Oil, of Indiana.

Besides his wife, the former Miss Henrietta Gittelsohn, and his son, he is also survived by two daughters, Mrs. Alvin Thalheimer and Mrs. Henry A. Rosenburg.

C. E. Jones Rites Held at Arlington

Charles E. Jones, 61, veteran newspaperman and former employe of The Post, was buried in Arlington Cemetery Tuesday. Services were held in Fort Myer Chapel.

At the time of his death, Mr. Jones was in charge of the rotogravure section of the Buffalo Times. Buffalo, N. Y. A veteran of the Spanish-American War and member of the intelligence unit of the Department of Justice during the World War, he also was a member of the National Press Club and the Manor Club.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marguerite R. Jones; twin sons, Charles and Eugene Jones; two brothers, N. T. and W. C. Jones, and a sister, Miss Lillian Jones.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

When partner makes a forcing bid your first step should be to look at your hand to see whether or not you can give him any encouragement toward a slam. If you have substantially more than you would need for a minimum response you should find some bid which expresses this extra value.

North's bid of four clubs was just such an encouraging bid. South

	♠ 6 4 ♡ K J 5 ◇ A J 7 4 ♣ J 6 5 2
♠ 5 3 2 ♡ A 10 8 7 ◇ 10 9 6 3 2 ♣ 9	West / East / South	♠ J 10 9 7 ♡ Q 4 3 2 ◇ K Q 8 ♣ 8 3
	♠ A K Q 8 ♡ 9 6 ◇ 5 ♣ A K Q 10 7 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

naturally entertained slam ambitions and made the asking bid of four hearts. North showed second-round control of hearts and the Ace of diamonds (by his five diamond response), whereupon South bid the small slam.

South, dealer.

West opened the fourth-best diamond. Dummy won with the Ace, and South considered his plays for the slam. One chance was that the King and Queen of diamonds would drop, establishing the Jack. Another was that one opponent would have the J-10-9 of spades and that the eight of spades would become established. This would enable him to discard two hearts from the dummy. Failing either of these, he would have to lead a heart from his own hand and guess whether to play dummy's King or Jack.

Because of the scarceness of entries, the first named possibility was the first to be explored. At trick two a low diamond was led from dummy, South ruffing high. When East dropped the Queen, South cashed the Ace of clubs and returned to dummy with the Jack. Another diamond ruff established dummy's Jack and South subsequently discarded one of his losing hearts.

Curb Prices Sag; Trading Declines

New York, July 28 (AP).—The curb market drifted quietly lower today. A few specialties managed to force their way up for modest gains. Great Atlantic & Pacific lifted 1⅛ to 89¾ and Pittsburgh Plate Glass advanced ¼ to 123. United Wallpaper ended at 4, up ⅛.

Leading the downward procession was Aluminum Co., with a drop of 3¼ to 144¼. Utilities and oils fell back fractionally. American Gas & Electric declined ⅞ to 36⅞ and Northern States Power "A" closed at 24½, off 2¼. Gulf Oil sagged ⅞ to 58 and Creole Petroleum finished at 36, off¼. Others pointing down were St. Regis Paper, Wright Hargreaves, McWilliams Dredging and American Cyanamid "B."

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 28 (AP).—Stocks eased from a firm and active morning session to close about steady today. Mines maintain early strength throughout and gilt-edged issues and German bonds were firm. Profit-taking in home rails erased most gains. Industrials, oils and transatlantics were uneven.

Paris—The bourse inclined to heaviness in final heaviness today. Government bonds were exceptions. The industrial group was weak. Bank of France lost 10 points, while Suez Canal advanced 90.

Liverpool—In a quiet market, wheat futures sold to ¼d net higher today. Moderate demand for Australian wheat afloat, firmer American winter wheat and covering sent prices higher at one time. The market reacted partially under profit taking. After a steady opening, cotton futures eased under persistent Bombay and local selling. The close was barely steady, 8 to 9 points net lower.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Drying up of foreign balances that have been moving out of New York into Dutch and British currencies accounted for the recession in the guilder and sterling against the dollar in New York foreign exchange dealings yesterday, traders reported.

The French franc gave a little ground in quiet dealings and it was said the French exchange control had come to the support of the 90-day forward franc for the first time.

The Holland guilder dropped .13 of a point to 55.08 cents. Experts believed the Bank of The Netherlands would welcome an until return to around the 54.76 cent level and that the guilder has been considered too high during recent months.

The British pound lost ½ cent to be quoted at one time at $4.97⅞. The French franc was 3.74½ cents, off .00⅛ of a cent. Swiss francs and the belga were a little lower.

In London the dollar gained ⅜ of a cent to 4.97⅜ to the pound, compared with 4.97 for sterling in New York overnight. Francs ended at 132.87 to the pound, against 133 yesterday. Paris cables reported the dollar closed at 3.745 cents to the franc, compared with 3.74⅜ cents to the franc in New York overnight.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, July 28 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Ohio fleeces received a few calls in the wool market today. Occasional sales were closed on graded combing medium fleeces at 43 to 44 cents for three-eighths blood and 42@43 cents for quarter bloods in the grease. Country packed lots of Ohio fleeces containing combing and clothing lengths of three-eighths and quarter blood grades together were firmly quoted at 43 cents, delivered East.

A number of buyers bid for wools of this description but their offers were mostly around 42 cents, with occasional bids up to 42½ cents in the grease.

If There's Another World War—Can America Stay Out?

With the flames of war raging on both sides of the U. S.—in China and in Europe—Can America Stay Out If There's Another World War?

The timeliness of this question prompted the American Institute of Public Opinion canvass of voters of the U. S. to get their opinions. This Sunday, "America Speaks" will tell you what the average voter thinks of America's chances of staying out of another World War.

Airline Pilots Protest Plan to Improve Port

Fliers' Report Asserts Field Never Can Be Made Safe.

Washington airport is dangerous, and will not be safe even if improved in accordance with the provisions of the May bill, according to a statement filed last night with the House Military Affairs Committee by David L. Behncke, president of the Airline Pilots Association.

The measure, on which the committee has been holding hearings for the past two days, would authorize the transfer of Military road to the airport and the filling in of Boundary Channel lagoon. Under its provisions 56 acres of Arlington Experimental Station land would be leased to the terminal in order to improve its facilities.

"A modern airport," the statement says, "cannot be built in or near a large city and Washington is no exception."

It also points out that improvements of the present air terminal may hinder the development of a truly adequate airport in the suburbs.

Two Airports Urged.

Although supporting Behncke's contention that an air terminal is needed on the outskirts of the city, Col. J. Monroe Johnson, assistant Secretary of Commerce, declared yesterday in a hearing before the committee that he was in favor of the proposal to improve the present terminal. "I would be more in favor of it," he said, "if it were more far reaching."

Congress should even go farther than the May bill proposes, Johnson said, and condemn the right of way of the Pennsylvania Railroad to the south of the field, and the land on which are tall smoke stacks, considered hazards to navigation near the terminal, in order to develop an airport near the center of Washington which can be used "95 per cent of the time."

Bill Passage Urged.

Col Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association of America, another witness, also urged the passage of the May bill. He declared that Washington airport is safe under the present regulations, but stated that it can be used by transport companies only part of the time. He also contended that two airports would be needed in the near future to take care of air traffic in the vicinity of Washington.

War Department officials declared that there was no objection to the closing of Military Road which long since has ceased to be of any value for Army purposes.

Opposition to the measure was expressed by E. C. Auchter, acting chief of the Farm Industries Bureau of the Agriculture Department. He declared that the 56 acres which the May bill proposed to lease to the terminal company was the only land suitable for certain types of experiments now carried on by his department.

Parks Unit Opposes Plan.

Representative J. Mark Wilcox, of Florida, interposed to say that so far as he could see the Agriculture Department was carrying on experiments at the station in his district which were intended to prove that plants which grew "wild all over the State" would grow under cultivation.

Declaring that plane landings in the area provided by filling in Boundary Channel would create a traffic hazard on the Washington Memorial boulevard similar to the one now present on the Military road, Secretary Thomas S. Settle voiced the National Capital Park and Planning Commission's opposition to the plan.

Advocates of the Thomason proposal to provide legislation for the creation of a Government-owned air terminal at Washington Airport were informed by Assistant Secretary Johnson that he was in favor of the proposal, but only so far as the National Capital was concerned. He said he was opposed to Federal ownership of all of the commercial airports of the country.

Emergency Reported.

Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, former chairman of the House sub-committee on local airport bills, testified that present conditions at Washington Airport created an emergency which could be rectified only by enactment of the May bill.

A typewritten statement distributed to newspapermen at the hearing by Freeland Chew, member of the board of commissioners of Arlington County, branded the move to enlarge the airport as a "well-conceived plan by the airport officials to increase the sale value of their property." His statement said it is "unthinkable that the Government would consider giving to a private corporation valuable industrial lands in Arlington County and thereby greatly increase the salable value of an airport site which the corporation is desirous of turning over to the Federal Government."

Pointing out that work to improve Military road will be begun shortly by Arlington County authorities under permission granted by the War Department, Chew said the $25,000 which the airport has offered to donate toward the construction of a new road "would be little compensation to the people of Arlington County" for the sale to the Government of the Washington Airport, "thus forever withdrawing from taxation more than 140 acres of our most valuable industrial land."

The Postilion
A Town Crawling With Crickets.

TOM McCARTHY.

SUNDANCE, WYOMING, July 26.—"They've got a mouth like a lizard, and they haven't any wings."

The customers in Gushurst's Grocery Store in Lead, S. Dak., moved closer to hear Bert Hedstrom's story. Bert had just come back from Sundance, Wyoming, a town taken over by the "Mormon" crickets.

"They're about as long as your little finger," he continued, "and sort of like an overgrown grasshopper, except they're wingless and a dirty brown color. The telephone pole in front of the Feed and Grain Store looked as though it had been wrapped in burlap. They were so thick on the walks, in places, you couldn't move without stepping on them. The whole town is up in arms."

Right then and there, I decided to get up to Sundance and take a look at a town besieged by insects.

An old friend in Lead volunteered to drive me into Wyoming and, what started out as pilgrimage to the "Mormon" crickets, proved to be a cross-section view of the troubles of the farmer, with some wonderful scenery thrown in for good measure.

* * * *

AS YOU LEAVE the Black Hills and cross into Wyoming, the land levels off into smaller slopes, lush with rich buffalo grass, and as delicately shaped as roving sand dunes. There had been a good deal of rain in the week past, and the grass was thick and green.

I was told that, a year ago, this land was one long sweep of desert, burned down by the assaulting sun. This year, however, given sufficient moisture, it was a picturesque countryside in vivid contrast.

The bright green swells, splotched with patches of red clay, swept toward the dark outlines of the Black Hills, themselves topped by fleecy clouds adrift in a blue sky. One could well imagine the lone pioneer riding contentedly across this trail and, at the day's end, finding shelter and peace with a pipe and a fire in the protective confines of one of those dimples in the land called "draws."

However, a few miles out of Sundance all observation of the scenery was brought to an end. The road literally swarmed with dark brown objects which from a distance looked like carelessly spread gravel. Our entrance into Sundance was made over a veritable carpet of "Mormon" crickets, producing a sound like small firecrackers as the tires of our car passed over them.

* * * *

SUNDANCE IS a little town of about 500 inhabitants, and, driving down the main street, evidences of the cricket invasion could be seen on every side. Eight-inch board fences, topped with tin, had been built around some of the lawns to turn back the invading insect army. Housewives were out, sweeping furiously, for perhaps the tenth time that day, in an effort to clear the porches and walks.

Some houses remained curiously untouched, and others literally crawled with the invaders. On the side wall of one house, you could not have found space to put your hand, with the crickets clustering in thick masses under the eaves. They crawled on the walks, and, though they cannot fly, they had even ascended to the roof of the porch.

I called the owner to the door and asked him what he was doing about the crickets. He said that he wasn't doing much of anything and advised me to go uptown to see them where they were "really bad." He said that he hadn't been bothered much by them, but that it was bad uptown. I'm afraid he hadn't been out recently to look at his own house, for it was certainly the most besieged residence in town. Possibly it would have made him uncomfortable if he'd known it. He went back into the house content that everyone else was much worse off.

Just as the man at the little office of the Sundance Times was explaining to me that the crickets were apparently moving out of town and that a board fence, topped with tin, had been built around the town to stem the tide of new invasions, a tall, gaunt farmer entered the room and the conversation.

"You think you've got 'em bad here!" he said. "I'd like to show you what they're doing out at my place."

The newspaperman was quick to meet the challenge. "You couldn't have them any worse than I had 'em three days ago. There must have been 500 pounds of 'em hangin' on my lilac trees. Their weight brought the trees right to the ground."

"Well, I'm telling you I'd like to show you my oat field. They've eaten patches 3 feet square and right down to the stubble. If I hadn't had the Government men out there this morning with poison spray, I wouldn't have a crop standing tonight. I can show them to you 2 and 3 inches deep."

"I'd like to see them," I told him.

* * * *

HE STRODE ALONG the furrow plowed around his 20-acre field of oats. The furrow held a white powder containing arsenic and was sprinkled with dead and dying crickets.

"When they cross that furrow, they're gone," he said. "They get the arsenic on their feet, and it burns them. They try to eat the stuff off, and then they're through. But it takes about five hours for it to get them."

The oats in an irregular 3-foot square had been eaten to the stubble. Dead crickets were piled on top of one another forming a layer 2 or 3 inches deep.

"It's too bad you didn't come out here when the sun was shining. The early morning is the best time to see them. They climb to the top of the oats and eat the grain." He plucked a stripped oat straw and offered it in proof. "All the oats in this section of the field were bent over with the weight of them this morning. It was as though there was a heavy wind blowing. I think I've got 'em licked in this field now, and the Government men are coming in two more days to spray again. They've got 200 men fighting them in this county alone, and they're so busy you can hardly get around.

The telegram addressed to "C. Carl Chaffin, Sundance, Wyoming," was from Senator O'Mahoney. It informed of a Congressional appropriation of a million dollars to fight grasshoppers.

"The hoppers will probably be along just as we get these crickets licked," Mr. Chaffin said. "Other years, it was the drought. I used to have 150 head of cattle. I've saved 30. I've got 3,000 acres of land here, one head for every hundred acres. Sometimes I wonder just where all this is going to end."

An hour later, at a little after 9, as I ate a late supper in Sundance, it began to hail. It is rare to have a hail storm at night, but it came on the wings of a strong wind from the Northeast; and the icy pellets, as large as 5-cent pieces, rattled off the roof and gathered inches deep in the gutters.

I wondered if Mr. Chaffin's oat crop, which had survived the crickets, would survive the hail. I could understand why he was curious as to where it was all going to end.

Dr. France's Ad To Bring Divorce Suit 'Up to Date'

Port Deposit, Md., July 28 (AP).—Dr. Joseph I. France, former Senator from Maryland and candidate for the Republican nomination for President in 1932, said tonight an advertisement he inserted in a New York newspaper today "merely brings up to date" his divorce action against his wife.

Dr. France early in June filed suit in the Cecil County Circuit Court asking that his marriage to former Tatania Dechterava, of Russia, be dissolved. He charged she deserted him in September, 1931.

The advertisement, he said, specified he would not be responsible for debts other than those incurred by himself.

Mrs. France, daughter of a member of the Russian Court of Appeals under the Czar, is in Europe, her husband said. She had until July 21 to answer his divorce action, he added, and now has 15 days in which to appear before the court.

41 Security Names Ignored by Senate

By the Associated Press.

The Senate passed over the names of 42 experts and attorneys for the Social Security Board yesterday when they came up for confirmation. The names remain on the calendar for future action.

The Appropriations Committee reported favorably yesterday 41 of the names. Included among those whose names remained in committee were Frank Bane, executive director of the board; John J. Corson, his assistant, and Leroy Hodges, director of the Bureau of Old Age Benefits, all Virginians.

2 Md. Brigades To 'Bomb' 3d In Hill 'Battle'

1st Infantry to Engage in Maneuvers at Ringgold.

By Phillip J. Austensen.

A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 28.—Three battalion problems will occupy the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, tomorrow. The problems have been prepared by Maj. Thompson A. Lyon, plans and training officer, and will have the area around camp for their locale.

The men will be transported into position by the trucks of Company D, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, which was formed May 3, from residents of the area around Cascade. The company is commanded by Sergt. Leland T. Reckord, brother of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland.

Company D also will transport the regiment to a regimental problem at Harbaugh Church near Ringgold Friday. One battalion will be in defense and the other two will attack. The battle will be given realism by blank cartridges, smoke bombs and rockets.

The Three Generals.

The First Battalion is commanded by Capt. Guy Anders, the Second by Maj. Harry Flook and the third by Maj. Stephen Fuller.

Sergt. Charles Peter, of Silver Spring was injured yesterday in the service of supply problem of the Service Co. A truck backed into him, injuring his leg. Medical officers said they did not believe his injury would permanently affect him.

Private Fred Birdseye, of the Service Co., has been promoted to corporal, Capt. Ward W. Caddington announced yesterday.

Company L, of Crisfield, is leading in the kitchen inspection banner contest. The Service Co. is a close contender. The company having the cleanest kitchen at the most inspections will win the banner to wear on its guidon.

Annual Dance Held.

Private Marion B. Bryor, of Company D, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, tonight showed motion pictures he took at the Governor's Day parade of the Fifty-eighth Brigade July 18, at a private showing in the mess hall of his outfit.

Plans for movement of the regiment to its home stations are being worked out by Capt. Reckord and his aides who had charge of the successful movement of the regiment into camp and of all transportation for the camp.

The regiment is co-operating with Mrs. Blossom Reed, daughter of Gen. Walter Reed, the yellow fever hero in whose honor Walter Reed Hospital in Washington was named, in a charity card party tomorrow night at her hotel in Blue Ridge Summit, the Blossom Inn.

Band to Give Concert.

Members of the regiment are assisting in decorations and the First Infantry Band will give a concert from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. Blossom is Mrs. Reed's nickname, but no one would identify her right name of Emily. She has been known as Blossom since her infancy, when she also was called the "yellow fever baby." Proceeds of the party will be devoted to the Community Parish House of the Church of the Tranfiguration at Blue Ridge Summit, Pa.

Four new ambulances are en route to the camp from Norwood, Ohio. They will arrive too late for this regiment's use but will be used by the Washington, Maryland and Virginia National Guardsmen, who arrive here August 7 for two weeks' training.

Eddie Duchin a Father.
